FAR election: Future of city may be at stake

By MAC McDONALD

ONE OF the most controversial issues to face Carmel voters in years has been reduced to a single sentence.

But that won't make it any easier for Carmel's citizens to come to a decision.

Part I

Carmel's so-called "FAR election" hinges on the wording of the ballot measure – called Measure E – to be voted on by residents come Tuesday, March 5:

"Shall the General Plan of Carmel-by-the-Sea and Ordinance No. 90-08 specify that 'Building intensity in the single-family residential area may not exceed 40 percent of the floor area ratio?' "

Measure E seeks to amend the city's Land Use Code with regard to residential design and development; the Carmel General Plan currently sets the floor area ratio – that is the percentage of the total square footage of the residence as opposed to the total square footage of the lot – at 45 percent for lots between 4,000 and 6,500 square feet.

In other words, your home's total floor area cannot take up more than 45 percent of the lot. On an average 4,000-square-foot lot, that would translate to 1,800 square feet at 45 percent, or 1,600 square feet at 40 percent, a difference of 200 square feet.

But, as has been evidenced by the contentiousness and emotion of the debate so far, there's more at stake here than simply 200 square feet.

Proponents of the 40 percent FAR – which include Councilmember Barbara Brooks and Carmel Residents Association board member Clayton Anderson – contend that that's the only way the city can exert any control over oversized homes from destroying the small village character of Carmel. That and to keep so-called "spec" builders from coming into the city, building large homes that fill the lots, selling them to the highest bidder, then departing with the profits, leaving their handiwork behind.

"I wonder if we want the 'spec' builders and real estate agents to determine the future of Carmel?" Anderson questioned during a public hearing on the issue last July.

Proponents, in short, claim that the future of Carmel and its existence as a quaint village in the forest is at stake.

On the other hand, opponents of the ballot measure – which have included Mayor Jean Grace and builder Chris Tescher – while agreeing that it is important that Carmel keep its small-village character, believe that restricting the floor area will not prevent unsightly homes or even stop "spec" builders from cashing in on the city's appeal.

"A poorly designed house is just as awful at 1,400 square feet as it is at 1,600 square feet," said Tescher at the same public hearing last July. Design review, not numerical restrictions, is the best way to approach the problem, opponents claim.

They also claim that a reduction of 200 feet will not make much difference in the outward appearance of the home, but will make a world of difference in the interior – in essence eliminating a bedroom or a guest room. That reduces the likelihood of starting or raising a family in the city and even discourages family members from visiting because of lack of space.

Opponents, in short, claim that the future of Carmel and its existence as a quaint village in the forest is at stake.

Thus both sides feel they have the best interests of Carmel at heart – they just have different ways of approaching it.

Peace vigil

RUTH WASLEY of Carmel held a silent vigil in protest of the war in the Persian Gulf at the busy corner of Carpenter and Highway 1 at the height of the rush hour last week. "I'm just expressing my grief for all the killing on all sides," said Wasley. "I feel war is so wrong and unnecessary and only creates greater problems." Her two-sided sign read "Stop the Killing," and "War is the Enemy," and her black veil was stitched with three peace symbols. (Mac McDonald photo.)

State considering imposing fees at Carmel River State Beach

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER 38 years of providing free access, residents could be asked to pay fees to use Carmel River State Beach.

Initiated by a $16 million budget cut by the state Legislature, state Department of Parks and Recreation officials say they are being forced to consider levying fees in all of their parks.

"I can't say that we would not (levy fees), but we haven't determined that we wouldn't," said Mary Wright, district superintendent. "We haven't focused on Carmel River State Beach."

However, observers are keeping a close eye on the state Coastal Commission, where the parks department recently applied for permission to levy fees in 19 locations across the state.

None of those locations, however, are on the peninsula.

While the commission orginally denied the department's request, citing that charging fees could limit free coastal access, the parks department has asked the commission to reconsider the matter, according to Linda Locklin, manager of the coastal access program for the Coastal Commission.

The parks department wants a total of 42 permits to impose use fees statewide, Locklin said. The remaining 23 permits would be applied for in city and county jurisdictions.

The majority of those would utilize "iron rangers," a common device where patrons insert money in a slot and are given a receipt to place on their windshield.

"The catalyst for this was the budget process," said Wright, adding that many of the state's 275 parks raised fees last September.

Community leadership

WE ALL know individuals whom we admire because they somehow find the time and energy to take an active leadership role in community projects and causes.

Obviously, they are few in number compared to the rest of us who do the admiring and gain from their efforts. And so it is right and proper that the many should honor the few. But how?

Fortunately, the Carmel Residents Association has found at least one way. They call it the Annual Citizen of the Year Award Celebration.

Everyone is invited to attend this year's Citizen of the Year Award Celebration this Sunday, Feb. 10 at the Scout House, Mission and Eighth, from 3 to 5 p.m. Food and refreshments – generously donated by local restaurants – will be served.

This will be the third year that the CRA has sponsored this most civic event. The first year's winner (for 1988), was Councilman James R. Wright. For 1989 the award was presented to Joyce Stevens. Who will be the recipient (for 1990) of this highly prized honor? We will know at approximately 4:30 p.m. Sunday, the 10th.

And – at this Third Annual Celebration, the CRA will honor those businesses and professional services that have served the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea for 30 years and more! Aside from longevity of service, the primary criterion for selecting the honorees is that each business or service must have been in the same family ownership for 30 years or more.

Here are the names of those to be honored this Sunday. With few exceptions, the owners will all be present to receive their award.

Answer to the people

Dear Editor:

We wish to express our thanks and offer praise to Mac McDonald for his forthrightness and honest integrity in his recent editorial.

We wish he would do it more often; he could write one bi-monthly. Editors of daily newspapers write one daily.

With the "back-room policies" we experience in this small community, please Mr. McDonald, keep writing editorials. Perhaps it will enlighten some of our citizens.

Has Doug Schmitz served as city administrator too long? His salary is paid by the citizens. He most certainly should be only too happy to answer any and all questions.

The selections for the Carmel 2016 committee was shepherded by Doug Schmitz. He made the decision as to what to eliminate from the city budget, due to revenue shortfall.

We need a city administrator who realizes he works for the people; not one who assumes too much authority.

In bad shape

Dear Editor:

Your report on the water management district's discussion of Phase IV rationing (Jan. 31) contained an unfortunate error, stating that "residences, golf courses and parks would be required to reduce their water use by 20 percent from the 1988-89 base year figure." Not so! We are already saving more than that. The committee's recommendation was for a 40 percent reduction, not 20 percent.

Unless heavy rains come this spring, we are in bad shape. Water tables are at their lowest; in Carmel Valley even the few small pools which allowed fish and wildlife to survive previous droughts are drying up.

What disturbs me about the committee's recommendations is not the 40-percent cutback proposed for residents, but the suggestion that businesses be excused from further cutbacks, remaining at the Phase III level of 20 percent. These policies need public input and revision before Phase IV goes into effect.

District staff needs to estimate the effects of some alternatives to 40 percent, such as applying the present 82-gallon allowance to all residents, or even reducing it to 65 gallons (still more than the 50 gallons we got by with in 1976-77). Commercial users are more difficult to regulate, but their percentage savings should be comparable to whatever is demanded of residents, even if it means lesser profits for some. The water moratorium has had a major impact on the construction industry; equity requires that the hospitality industry and others should also contribute their fair share of water savings.

Bureaucratic quagmire

Dear Editor:

It is no surprise to the business community that the revenue to the city is down. It is down for all of us. I think that this can be substantially attributed to the perception of many visitors that Carmel is notorious for not wanting them, nor treating them humanely once they are here.

Carmel is known for its rigidly enforced lack of parking and its loss of the individualist shops in favor of chain stores. The parking can be solved by the Sunset garage, and the individualist could be brought back or retained if the city would revert to to its pre-oppressive, pre-1984 (Orwellian) zoning format.

In those days of glory, Carmel had just one simple commercial district and it did not have use permits. It also allowed almost all kinds of business with few restrictions. It was almost like America.

That system encouraged individuals to try their hand, whereas the current oppressive/restrictive use permit multi-zone bureaucratic quagmire control system stops the individual cold. Congratulations. Individual stores need maneuvering room to adapt to market changes. The use permit system prohibits the change; those who cannot adapt stagnate and die, ala the dinosaur.

The bureaucrats claim that this control is needed to effect the General Plan. But even the planning director was quoted in the Pine Cone as saying that the system does not work. Yet, for a close-to-home example, the city has spent almost $100,000 in lawsuits suing me for zoning compliance at my Paradise building and has accomplished nothing of value for the city and they continue to sue me.

Remember this if you ever dare to speak out against the system. They are notoriously punitive; $100,000 of your money for nothing except to punish Laub. Is that how you think your money should be invested? The city is wasting its resources to defend a system that they admit doesn't work.

Perhaps they feel that after they sue enough, maybe I too will sell out to a Japanese investor or another upscale chainstore. Who knows, maybe I might. I need only look up my block to see that most of my neighbors are gone. Where is the Cinderella Shop, Wells Bookstore, Village Hardware, or Kips Market today? All gone, and that is just one side of the street on my block.

Nobody can promote positive change through enforcing negativity. Revenue down? Where is the joy? The hope? The wonderment? The creativity? The individualism? All lost in the bureaucratic world our city has become.

As Einstein said, "All great spirits are opposed by mediocre minds." Do you suppose that maybe he thought that the self-made man, the builder was the mediocre mind and the bureaucrat the great spirit?

Operation of water company goes to residents

By SUSAN BECK

STILL WATER runs deep, and the stagnant water in the 50,000-gallon tank of the Cachagua Mutual Water Co. has caused an abyss of problems.

In Monterey County Superior Court on Feb. 1, Judge Richard Silver provided an opportunity to alleviate the most important problem to Cachagua residents who depend on the water system – the lack of clean, running water.

> 'We look at it as a victory. No one can blame Gates any longer. It was a tremendous burden, and he was working for free.'
> – John Hannon

Silver said there was sufficient evidence to prove that Don Gates, owner and operator of the water company, was not competent to run it any longer.

On a temporary basis, Silver gave responsibility of operating the water company to residents of the subdivision off Tassajara Road about 15 miles east of Carmel Valley Village.

"Judge Silver was very wise to go directly to the heart of it, getting water to us," said resident Judy Highley.

The Highleys didn't have water for a month during the Christmas holidays because the water system had been neglected for the past year and collapsed in December's cold weather, said Highley.

Water was restored to their home on Jan. 16, but, last week, she and her husband, John, were again without running water along with 13 other subdivision property owners.

The households don't have water because the tank, pipelines, and pumps are being completely refurbished. Resident Bud Tucker is in charge of the group's efforts to get the water system in good running order as well as the funds necessary to make that happen.

"The homeowners are excited about the program," said Tucker. "There's a lot of work to do, and we will be busy for some time. Ultimately, we want it worked out with shares as a mutual water company should be. Then we will be legally managing the company."

Silver said Gates was responsible for reasonable cost over and above the $26 monthly maintenance fee and service charge for water usage.

Pacific Grove attorney Jane Haines, representing the Cachagua residents, said the water tank has to be repaired by Saturday, Feb. 9 to receive state grant money to refill the tank.

"They have to move quickly," said Haines. She said the group has to replace the tank's lining and roof, remove mineral deposits, and repair and bury existing pipes.

Haines said the estimated cost is about $75,000. If Gates chooses not to be responsible for his share, she said, "we'll fight it out in court."

Gates' Carmel Valley attorney, John Hannon, said his client was, "relieved to be out of it."

"We look at it as a victory. No one can blame Gates any longer. It was a tremendous burden, and he was working for free," said Hannon. "They (Tucker and residents) will find out how hard it is to work with the county."

> 'The homeowners are excited about the program. There's a lot of work to do, and we will be busy for some time.'
> – Bud Tucker

Gates' attorney said the county gave conflicting instructions. For example, he said the Monterey County Health Department told Gates to bury the pipes in accordance with the 1989 county code.

However, said Hannon, the pipes were installed prior to '89, which should exempt Gates from the order.

"Do they (the health department) really mean it, yes or no. If an answer can come from the county, I would be glad to hear it," said Hannon.

Referring to Tucker, he said, "I really feel sorry for him. Now he can collect the $3,500 in back payments from all the homeowners who won't pay their bills.

"Every time Gates tried to collect the dues, the residents called the county," said Hannon.

However victorious Gates feels about Silver's decision, he still has to contend with two more issues.

The Monterey County District Attorney's office has filed a criminal action charging Gates with securities fraud (issuing shares without a permit). It had been scheduled to be heard in court Feb. 6. He also has to appear in Silver's court Feb. 22 on charges of contempt.

Gates failed to adhere to Silver's temporary restraining order requiring him to provide a continuous supply of drinking water to those served by the Cachagua Mutual Water Co.

"The mandatory injunction didn't work," said Silver. "I'm not going to tell him how to do his job again. He can agree or disagree at another hearing to determine otherwise."

Highley said that Silver made the best choice by giving the residents responsibility, but not ownership.

"It gives us time to later focus on what ownership entails. We didn't want to take responsibility for his (Gates') debts or his mishandling of the water company," said Highley.

The unexpected is norm at Feb. 5th council meeting

By EVE BRITTON

OFTEN THE unexpected happens even in seemingly routine city council meetings – take the regular meeting of the Carmel City Council on Feb. 5.

It started off innocently enough, all the players in position, the audience sitting patiently with the playbook open, then boom! Awards, Boy Scouts, a bus line dispute and a recurring speaker all threw the council into a new league of entertainment.

The No. 5 Monterey-Salinas Transit route cancellation last September brought Carmel residents out of the forest in droves. The route ran from downtown Carmel to Carmelo and Santa Lucia, serving residents for at least the last 20 years. Residents came before the council with a petition and a call to action.

City council members heard testimony about how the residents, mostly senior citizens, are virtually stranded without the route and the means to afford taxicabs. They told council members they could not participate in programs designed specifically for them at Sunset Center because they could not get there.

As a possible alternative to the bus system, City Administrator Doug Schmitz suggested a rideshare program. But, letter writer and petition leader Kaye Scott protested, "We lose our independence."

Then, the city council itself became irritated.

"I am totally unhappy with MST," Councilman Bob Fisher said. He suggested the council "take MST by the nose" and tell them what to do. And, if they didn't agree, just to pull out of the operation with them, possibly creating Carmel's own transit system, much like the one Pacific Grove had called the Monarch.

Other council members agreed with his get-tough attitude and council members were all speaking at the same time on the matter.

"It's a joint powers agency," Mayor Jean Grace said, trying to keep the peace. "All the cities run the bus company, we run the bus company."

Fisher was undaunted, "I'll bet if we told them we're pulling out..." he said.

Mayor Grace interrupted him, "you mean blackmail them?," she asked.

The council decided to send a tape of the evening's meeting to the MST board, as well as the petition signed by almost 50 residents, a "strongly worded letter from council," and an invitation to a town meeting so residents, who are unable to get to MST meetings because they do not have bus service, can meet with MST representatives in person.

TUESDAY'S MEETING began, however, with flash bulbs and scurrying as two local troops of Boy Scouts entered the standing-room-only council chambers to lead the Pledge of Allegiance.

After the pledge and flashbulbs died down, and the flag was awkwardly taken out, more scurrying and flashbulbs started as Grace presented the first annual "Unsung Hero" awards to local residents who do things "behind the scenes" for Carmel.

Six Carmel residents received a Couroc tray with the city seal on its face and a certificate of appreciaion from the city.

Dorothy Prince, E.T. (Brother) Planer, and Susan Resendez Davis were present to receive their certificates. Stanley Page, Harriet Harrell and Charis Buckminster were also honored, but could not attend.

City worker Ronald Prieto was presented with a certificate of commendation for extinguishing a blaze started by a ruptured gasoline line at the city's corporation yard on Jan. 16.

The council was also informed that Tuesday marked 20 years Greg D'Ambrosio had been with the city. He is the city's finance officer and director of administrative services.

After the awards, the council tended to the business of keeping the city work by hearing an appeal from the Carmel Presbyterian Church, which had applied for a permit to build additional office space, enabling the employees of the church to work together and bettering communication in the church.

The permit had been denied by the Carmel Planning Commission because the church is located in a residential area and commissioners said, according to Rick Tooker, assistant planner for the city, any addition to it would be a burden on the neighborhood.

A church spokesman told council members that proposed expansion would have no adverse impact on the neighborhood and would actually reduce the facility's water use.

Grace looked quizzically at the speaker and asked how it would save water. The speaker responded smiling, a planter would be removed if the addition is built.

The council voted to approve the planned expansion, but sent the design of it back to the planning commission for design review of the proposed floor plan uses.

The council also approved by resolution an ordinance allowing only vehicles with Carmel-by-the-Sea parking permits to park in areas designated as residential parking.

Future of city may be at stake

IF APPROVED, Measure E would change the city code to reflect a 40 percent FAR; if rejected by voters, the matter returns to the council, where, presumably, the current General Plan's 45 FAR would stand. But the controversy may not end there, as residents will undoubtedly form skirmish lines on an issue that has troubled the city for years – design review.

The roots of controversy and debate over the direction of the city run deep; they can even be traced back to when Carmel's vaunted "village character" was born and followed through the subsequent years of growth. Carmel residents even took sides over whether Ocean Avenue should be paved or not. "Progress" does not come easy in Carmel.

Many of those who support a 40 percent FAR point to the former Countess Claude de Kinnoull property as a root cause of the recent controversy.

Located at the south end of Torres Street near 11th Street, the large property consisting of several lots was put into a specific plan by action of the Carmel Planning Commission in December of 1986. Commissioners felt that by doing so they would have greater control over what could be built on the lots since a specific plan deals with a property as a whole and considers its impacts in terms of neighborhood character and its relationship to the rest of the city.

"A specific plan gives us more direction," then-Commissioner Bruce Roberts said in voting to keep the property in a specific plan and thus not allow estate administrators from selling off several lots.

The commission voted 5-1 to keep it in the plan, with then-Commissioner Bill Brown absent and then-Commissioner Olof Dahlstrand casting the dissenting vote. Dahlstrand said he didn't feel it would make much difference whether the property was dealt with in a specific plan or as a subdivision.

Kinnoull property attorney George Walker argued that the property was a "hardship case" and that by being in the specific plan process was costing the estate $20,000 to $25,000 a month.

The commission, however, wanted to deal with the property as a whole, saying the property's hardship was brought on by its own administrators.

Much to the chagrin of the commission, however, the Carmel City Council, in January 1987, unanimously overturned the planning commission's 5-1 vote, taking the property out of the specific plan process and putting it into a subdivision, thus allowing administrators more leeway in selling off lots.

That action didn't go over too well with commissioners.

"The results of one of the actions (of the city council) don't sit too well with me," said Roberts at a Jan. 14 planning commission meeting. "Not to say the council didn't do its homework, but I feel that the decision was made on more of an emotional background rather than a factual (one). Some of the points addressed toward the city and planning commission are not altogether true or factual."

Commissioners (Dahlstrand excepted), felt that the council was not made aware of the neighbors' concerns expressed at commission meetings and the deliberation that commissioners went through to arrive at their decision.

Be that as it may, the decision by the council stood.

THE SPECIFIC issue of floor area ratio didn't rear its head until the planning commission – as ordered by the council – begin its review and revision to the city's residential design review code in 1988.

FAR was only one of the many issues that the commission considered, including such things as solar rights, private views, upper canopy trees, setbacks, open space, and demolitions.

The revisions split the commission – and community – into two basic camps: those who favored "specific numerical standards" as a way of regulating size, appearance and character of new homes, and those who favored stricter design review to achieve those goals.

The commission was unable to come to a consensus on the issue, throwing the ball into the council's court.

"This split is based on a fundamental difference in perspective between those commissioners who believe mass and bulk should be regulated more through specific numerical standards and those who feel the present standards are sufficient but that the design review process should be strengthened and improve to achieve the overall design goals of the city," a staff report to the council stated in August 1989.

Thus the council began a long and arduous task of trying to revise the codes in such a way that it would help retain what character Carmel already had, but not tread too hard on private property rights. It didn't help that the commission and the community were split on the issue.

Perhaps ironically, the first special meeting of the council to consider revisions to the residential codes was set for 4 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 17, 1989. As many in Northern California are now too painfully aware, almost exactly an hour later the devastating Loma Prieta earthquake shook the area to its foundation, postponing any discussion – or decision – until later in the year.

(Next week, in Part II, the city council begins deliberations on design review in earnest, debating the concept of "village character" and the possibility of establishing a design review commission or committee. The city also finds itself embroiled in an emotional and discordant election campaign. A new council member changes the balance of the council, which begins to seriously focus on the issue of floor area ratio.)

No surprises in results of commercial zone survey

By EVE BRITTON

CARMEL PLANNING Commission members looked with great interest, but registered little surprise at the results of the commercial district survey presented to them at a special meeting Jan. 30.

Lack of parking was listed by respondents as the leading factor limiting the success of their business. Local economic conditions was the second reason listed, followed closely by international and national economic conditions.

The survey was mailed to 640 businesses in Carmel and 349 were returned completed. The survey is part of the first phase of the commercial district rezone study being conducted by the Carmel City Council. The city began the study in response to testimony heard by both the council and planning commission complaining that the existing code is not working, according to Diane White, city planning director.

''They said it was having a negative impact on existing businesses,'' White said. The survey was sent out in the last week of December to all businesses in the commercial district with a fixed address. The businesses were given until Jan. 18 to respond.

White said the data from the survey was merely tabulated and will not be analyzed or used for action until the rest of phase one results are in, which should be around March.

The commission also approved a resolution amending the city's current sign code regarding real estate and local business signs.

The major change will concern real estate signs which will now be allowed on public property when it is impossible to place them on private property. An encroachment permit must be obtained to do this, so that the city staff can ensure the sign is warranted.

Not surprisingly, for Carmel, the commission deicided as part of its revision in signs, to still not allow any neon, flashing, phosphorescent or signs incorporating light or movement. Basically, the commission defined what constitutes a sign, when a sign is permitted and the number and sizes of signs.

The draft sign ordinance changes came about because of a need for uniformity for the design review process.

Commissioners decided to recommend the city council adopt an ordinance amending ''payment in-lieu'' fees in the city code.

After some discussion the commission recommended the council allow a phased payment for parking spaces by property owners when the amount of spaces exceeds two. The payments for the spaces including all interest (at whatever the legal rate is), which would be paid by the owner within five years.

Most of the commissioners' discussion on the matter centered around how ''the little guy'' would be able to afford the parking spaces, which cost $25,000 per space.

''There is a feeling that a lot of policy favors the rich conglomerate over the little guy,'' Commissioner Lindsay Hanna said. ''The small fellow with little resources cannot pay up front.''

Commissioner Stephen Poohar countered Hanna's statement, ''If you are a developer in this town you are not a little guy.''

Funds from the sale of the parking spaces are placed into an account for the city to use only for parking.

Reisdent Arthur Hoffman attended the meeting concerned that he and other ham radio operators would have problems with the commission's proposed regulation of all antennas.

Hoffman is the assistant area coordinator for the Amateur Radio Emergency Service and said there are approximately 10 ham operators in Carmel who perform important functions in emergencies such as 1989's earthquake.

''We do a good job supplying emergency help to the community,'' he said. ''Exempting the hams would be appreciated.''

Commissioners listened to Hoffman tell how small the antennas are (reaching a maximum height of 36 inches), and how the radio's use is strictly monitored by federal regulations.

But, Commissioner Brian Congleton was still concerned. ''Unknowingly, visual pollution might occur,'' he said.

Commissioners ruled, however that the ordinance as worded by staff will reign. Hoffman had looked at the ordinance and said he found that it would not hinder the work of amateur radio users.

The city does still maintain the right of control over the placement of satellite antennas, but, by law, it cannot prohibit them.

Commissioners considered a proposed recommendation to the city council ''allowing exceptions and incentives for preservation of significant structures.''

They ruled the proposal was premature and not necessarily in keeping with the general plan. They voted to continue the matter until the general plan has been reviewed.

Commissioners also put down the idea of a minimum tree density per lot ordinance because it was seen as too stringent, and not necessarily beneficial.

''I'm a little scared of over-regulation,'' Commissioner Jack Kennedy said.

Compromise reached on expansion of Sunset administrative offices

By MAC McDONALD

A COMPROMISE was reached Monday on expansion of Sunset Center administrative offices in The Photographic Center after an 11th-hour meeting between the two parties involved.

As in most compromises both sides were not entirely pleased with the final solution, but each said they could live with an arrangement in which the Sunset Center would take less space from the photo center than they had originally asked for.

The Carmel Community and Cultural Commission unanimously approved (7-0) the compromise after a brief hearing at the meeting held in the standing-room-only Bingham Room at the center.

Commission Chairman Dr. Robert Infelise prefaced the meeting by revealing the ''historical context'' of the request and need to expand administrative offices at the center and the existence of a compromise.

An executive committee of the cultural commission and members of the board of directors of the photo center hammered out an agreement on Sunday before the commission meeting.

''I want to reaffirm that all of us want The Photographic Center to stay here and are highly supportive of it,'' said Commissioner Linda Anderson, a member of the executive committee, at the hearing. ''That's a given. I hope we come to a conclusion that's fair to everyone.''

Infelise agreed.

''The issue is not whether one or the other should exist,'' he said. ''We're all partners in this operation – the tenants are the junior partners. I think The Photographic Center is an important adjunct to this.''

Commissioners said they felt comfortable with the compromise even though they would be getting less space than anticipated.

''In the compromise there's a great deal more space than The Photographic Center thought they were going to get,'' said Anderson.

''I personally think it's a very good compromise,'' said Brian Donoghue, director of the Sunset Center and the one most affected by the expansion from the city's standpoint. ''It's truly about as good as we can go.''

Donoghue added that the problem of lack of space for his office to operate was ''glaring'' and longstanding and that the problem preceded his hiring last year.

But members of The Photographic Center had another view of the situation.

''I say it really restricts our future,'' said Roger Fremier, executive director of the photo center, adding that the Friends of Photography found themselves in a similar situation of lacking space, a situation that forced that group to move out of Carmel to San Francisco.

Fremier said that his group, which he marshalled to action with an emergency letter Jan. 29 to the membership, felt ''pressed to the wall'' by the city's actions.

''Most had already been decided when it got to us,'' he said. ''In the whole plan (by the city) we haven't been able to figure out what their needs are. The minute we (raised a fuss) they came up with an alternate plan.''

''They haven't given us an alternative that takes our needs into account,'' added Huntington Witherill, a photographer and board member of the center. ''It's not really a compromise, it's the city's. They determine what they need and they take it.''

No actual square footages were discussed during the meeting, but the original expansion called for 343 square feet of the photo center's 541 square feet of space.

The compromise plan ''gives back'' the photo center a long and narrow space that is being currently used as storage. A request by Fremier for an additional 3-by-5-foot space that would eliminate an awkward corner and the moving of a doorway was denied by the commission.

Carmel City Councilman Ken White, who attended the meeting, suggested to the photo center that something could possibly be worked out by both sides for that 3-by-5 space when an architect for the Friends of the Sunset Foundation examines the space and comes back to the commission for a report.

The commission's decision would only reach the city council level if it is appealed, White added.

with a proposed ordinance to safeguard trees during construction, demolition or tree removal.

"Trees are stressed due to the drought and bark beetles...it's exasperated on construction sites," he said. "It would be more prudent if we were more clear about what the regulations are."

The council voted to approve the ordinance, which calls for construction materials to be placed away from the tree dripline and protective barriers be placed around the trees.

The council approved an ordinance prohibiting property owners from attempting to restrict public areas around their lots. This, council members said, was most commonly seen in the form of no-parking signs in front of private driveways.

Fischer said he thought residents could put up signs saying "private driveway," but not signs such as "Thou shalt not park," etc. That way residents could still get the point across, without becoming a regulating body.

Connie Laub, who co-owns Paradise Alley on Ocean Avenue with her husband Paul, approached the podium to discuss a lawsuit between the city and Laub Corp. The lawsuit is still in litigation so City Atty. Donald Freeman advised her that she was not to address council on the matter.

Words flew between Grace and Laub as Freeman read from the court order. Laub began talking about something other than the litigation, but soon went back to it, at which point Mayor Grace interjected.

"That is all, that's all, thank you very much," she said, raising her voice above Laub's. "We cannot hear you today."

Laub went up before the council during the public hearing portions on more than nine occasions and went up on one issue more than once, at which time Grace told her she was only hearing from people who had not spoken on the matter yet.

"You've already spoken on this and everything else, thank you," Grace said.

As the hours ticked away, the audience in the chambers did not dwindle much. Many people were waiting for a resolution involving residential parking permits on Torres Street between Mountain View and Ninth Avenue, Eighth Avenue between Junipero Avenue and Santa Fe Street, and Ninth Avenue between Torres Street and Junipero Avenue.

Residents and representatives argued in the chambers between each other, while trying to convince the council of what they wanted.

One of the strongest arguments presented that night against making the streets residential parking only, was that visitor cars were only moving to other streets.

"I'd vote against any residential parking program where we get this kind of response from the area," Councilman James Wright said.

Grace said the reason this whole fight is going on is because now there is paid parking at Sunset Center. "I was always against paying for parking... now we have an obligation to try and remedy that impact," she said.

The council voted to keep the area residential parking only except for a paved portion of Ninth Avenue which ends in a cul de sac.

IN OTHER action, council received a report from the Arts and Hospitality Committee.

The council decided to extend the committee's existence for six months and the committee was directed to come up with ideas for a visitors' brochure and then budgeting will be decided based on approval of the design. The committee will also be looking at a separate listing in the phone book for visitor information to alleviate the burden on staff of answering questions.

The city council authorized Mayor Grace to represent the city on the countywide task force on tourism. "But I don't want to go if they start asking for money," she said.

Two women were appointed to the Carmel 2016 committee. The commitee consisted of only men until the addition of Suzanne Lenard and Anne Becket.

The council heard a report from a Carmel Disposal Service spokesman about the city's recycling progress. He said the city has been doing better than anticipated and has become a model program for other cities.

Currently there is a 13 to 15 percent reduction in waste going to the landfill, which means 115 tons of material a month for commercial and residential in Carmel.

Carmel Disposal Service is planning on a recycling program for phone books, tin cans annd more improved recycling for glass from bars and restaurants.

The city approved a letter showing the city's position on transportation control measures be sent to the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG). The measures were presented to the council at the Jan. 22 meeting. The AMBAG Board of Directors is expected to take action on the measures on Feb. 13.

Four measures were highlighted by city staff and approved by council for the letter. The parking management measure proposes a charge for all public parking in commercial zones, forcing to people to car pool or drive less. City staff said at issue is its effectiveness in the Carmel area.

The Visitor Transit Shuttle measure, though not wholly opposed by the city, needs clarification. And, the city is concerned about a shuttle exiting off 17 Mile Drive in Pebble Beach at the Carmel gate. Council and staff also wanted to know whether a shuttle will be a bus or a van.

The street and highway improvement measure was of concern to staff and council because of the much-debated proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway and how that would affect the community.

The last measure staff discussed was the development and maintainence of bicycle facilities. Council and staff support this measure and council has made bicycle lanes within the city one of its goals for 1991-1992.

The next council meeting is scheduled for March 5 at 4 p.m. in the City Council Chambers.

Theater community expresses shock at charges against local actor

By DAVID LELAND

STAFF, PARENTS and students at Children's Experimental Theater are meeting with psychologists to combat confusion and fear, a week after an instructor at the school was arrested on charges of child molestation.

Staff member Norman Lee Stottmeister, 30, pleaded not guilty to 28 charges of sexual abuse last Friday in Salinas Municipal Court. He is being held in lieu of $50,000 bail, according to sheriff's deputies.

"It's unbelievable to all of us," said CET founder and artistic director Marcia Hovick. "We still have our jaws hanging."

Two psychologists have been employed by the school, Hovick said, adding that parents have been supportive of the school since the arrest occurred and that none have pulled their children from classes.

To allay fears, Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras told The Pine Cone that there is no evidence that anyone else connected with CET was involved with the alleged molestations.

Stottmeister, who had been employed at the school for almost five years, is accused of having had sex with boys ages 13-17 who were enrolled in his classes at CET between 1987-90.

"He was very well liked by the youngsters and the parents," said Hovick, giving a general impression of Stottmeister.

The investigation began Jan. 21 after Carmel police and county investigators received an anonymous telephone tip that sexual activity was taking place at CET between Stottmeister and students, according to Poitras.

"Very rapidly it began to appear that there was potential for multiple victims and for violations in more than one jurisdiction," said Poitras, who, because of the diverse geographical area of the alleged violations, called in sex-crimes specialist James Brown, a former Los Angeles policeman who now works with the district attorney's office.

A total of five victims were named in the voluminous report on file at the courthouse in Salinas. The boys lived with their parents in Carmel, Pacific Grove, Monterey and the county, according to court documents.

"There appears to be little question that (Stottmeister) has actively recruited young male juveniles from the membership of CET with the express purpose of having sexual relations with them," according to court records.

If convicted of all charges, Stottmeister faces 16 years in prison, according to Klar Wennerholm, assistant district attorney.

COURT RECORDS show conflicting reports concerning Stottmeister's behavior at CET.

For example, one parent of a victim told police that she was "worried about Norman's sexual orientation" and the close relationship that was beginning to develop between the actor and her son, court documents say.

After going to Hovick, who "assured her that there was nothing to worry about," the woman confronted Stottmeister and told him to "keep his hands off of her son," according to court records.

However, Hovick said she was never aware of Stottmeister's sexual leanings – despite the fact that the actor lived with her for about two years.

Hovick asked Stottmeister to find another place to live shortly before he was arrested, but the action apparently had nothing to do with the alleged crimes.

Hovick added that it is not unusual for staff members at CET to live with her because the acting profession is traditionally a low-paying one.

And while one witness testified that Stott-

meister was "the most talented actor on the peninsula," others said his past gave him little hope for a normal life.

Court records indicate that he was molested by family members. They further state that Stottmeister was discharged from the U.S. Army after it was discovered that he was a homosexual.

After being discharged from the Army, Stottmeister allegedly worked as a male prostitute to put himself through school, court records state.

Stottmeister, however, has no prior record of sexually related crimes, according to court documents.

While it was alleged that Stottmeister was fired from a job with the drama department at Monterey High School, that could not be confirmed by The Pine Cone.

Nevertheless, court documents say that Stottmeister began befriending students shortly after being hired by the school.

One victim was described as "being in love" with Stottmeister, and "would do anything to protect him."

Another told investigators that he "really loved Norman as a friend," and didn't want to testify against him because he didn't want Stottmeister to get in trouble.

Court documents say that sexual liaisons took place in cars, victims' homes and, twice, late at night at the Forest Theater, where Stottmeister had a key.

Hovick said she is attempting to keep an open mind regarding the case.

"It's shattering to think that he might have done this behavior if it's true, or that it was just an anonymous phone call if it's not true," she said. "We're shocked."

State may charge fees at beach downtown Monterey escalating from $2 to $4.

Wright said that parks in Southern California have long charged fees for use, a practice which surfaced during last summer's budget hearings in Sacramento.

"It became a recognition that there was an unequality issue," said Wright, referring to the difference in fees from one area to the next.

Only 40 percent of the cost of park operations is covered by fees, with the other 60 percent having been formerly made up out of the state's general fund.

In addition to Carmel River State Beach, other locations which could begin levying fees are Marina State Beach, Salinas River State Beach and Zmudowski State Beach.

Wright said no permission is needed by local jurisdictions if construction is not needed to carrying out the fee structure.

For example, at Marina, the parks department is planning to collect fees at its hang gliding concession.

At Carmel River State Beach, however, a permit would be needed, which would involve hearings before the Monterey County Planning Commission and Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Such a notion, however, drew skeptisim from 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman.

"I don't see the proposal as being in line with the promises that have been made to the people that there will be coastal access," she said, adding that some beach-goers would not be able to afford to use the beach. "It gives us a two-tiered system of access; there are some things that you have to draw the line at."

Wright added that Monastery Beach, which is officially part of Carmel River State Beach, would not face fees because parking is currently controlled by Caltrans.

It is unclear, however, if that thinking would change if two parking lots proposed for that area become reality.

CARMEL... AS I SEE IT

By Betty Barron

WAR IN the Gulf found many, perhaps most Carmelites, questioning, debating, expounding...and certainly watching television for instant news of developments.

As we face each day of war it is wise to look back on our past and come to conclusions as to the effects of devastation upon our earth, upon our various cultures, and upon the lives of so many men, women and children.

Looking to the past is an all-consuming interest of the Carmel Foundation class in autobiography which I conduct every Monday morning. In the six previous classes I have taught, I have listened to dozens of diverse backgrounds as intriguing as any a novelist could contrive...a woman who lived in Madagascar during most of her child hood; another, a man who revealed that he had been a monk for 12 years until one day he "walked away," later married and now has grandchildren; others have been musicians, teachers, business, politicians.

This present class is equally diversified. Some of the class are writing their autobiography for their grandchildren; others are writing solely for their enjoyment; some may publish their autobiography. Each person has a story to tell, each life is different, and each life has a message.

I pause here to relate excerpts from the life of Dale Lefler, a many-faceted man...a dancer on Broadway and in Hollywood films, later a dance instructor on the Monterey Peninsula...an artist, a philosopher, a friend to many. Of particular interest this week is a letter he wrote to his parents from aboard a ship bound for the occupation of Japan in 1945. He was 22 years old.

"This is my first attempt at writing since I came aboard six days ago. It was my plan to keep a daily diary account of this, my first voyage at sea. There are enough reasons why I haven't written a single word up to now. We were loaded in buses at Vancouver Barracks during a drizzling rain and practically floated those 10 miles to the Portland Pier where the USS President Adams awaited us. The Red Cross and a lively Army band was on the pier with doughnuts, hot coffee and hot music to bid us bon voyage.

HIT PARADE of 1943*...Hoofer Dale Lefler (far left), in the Republic Pictures extravaganza starring Susan Hayward and John Carroll, with Freddie Martin and his orchestra, as well as Count Basie and his orchestra.

"We were loaded into the hold so fast I didn't get a decent look at this vessel, so I haven't only an imagined idea of its size and shape.

"The Adams was commissioned in 1941. She has 26 Japanese ships to her credit and half that many planes. Our quarters are very cramped, stuffy and uncomfortable. The distance to Japan is approximately 4,200 miles and we've been chugging along at the rate of 48 miles a day. A rumor is afloat that Yokohama is our destination and that the artillery men aboard are to continue to Nagasaki. But, all could be changed before we've ridden another wave.

"All went smoothly as we set sail on Oct. 20, glided down the Columbia river and were allowed on deck to see the beautiful scenery of Washington and Oregon. I believe everyone was conscious that we were seeing American soil and grandeur for the last time for many months.

"It was at evening chow when everyone was below deck that the word came over the speaker that we were headed into a squall and all Army men were to lay below and hold fast. I had brought up the rear of the chow line and only a few of us remained on in the mess hall. When a squall hits, it hits fast and it was as if the ship started suddenly to jump hurdles. Tables and benches went sliding fore and aft and food was being spilled and piled up in corners. There wasn't one of us who didn't turn green and dizzy. I nearly lost my cookies several times but I stayed in the open as much as possible.

CARMEL AS I SEE IT

"Some of the boys haven't left their bunks since they dropped into them that first night. Since that first day when the tables went sailing all over, they decided to have us sit on the floor, anywhere we could find a place to squat.

"During the day hours while standing my watch (8-10 a.m., 4-6 p.m.), there is a continuous racket of heavy shod feet running up and down the steel steps, the loose chain railings clang, and with the shoutings of the troops, the crash bang of those solid steel bulkhead doors is ear bursting. My night watch (midnight to 2 a.m.) is in direct contrast to the days' ordeal. It is cold and quiet down in the hold alone, with only an occasional banging of the anchor chains against the sides of the vessel as it rolls dizzily from starboard to port side. I stood a watch or two up on deck and I was very content in the salt air with something to look at besides the blank white walls that so imprisoned me below. The upper decks of the ship are jammed to top capacity with small speed boats, landing craft, machinery and life rafts.

"The weather has been changeable..one day it will be freezing with a sharp wind, then it will be calm and warm and peaceful. We have had memorable sunsets and it is a beautiful sight seeing old Sol dip into the sea. The stars and moon seem closer and are more billiant than upon land. I have studied the water for long periods and marvel at its ever-changing color and texture. I've seen it inky blue with many a whitecap. One time it reminded me of a huge vat of purple grape jam. In the moonlight the water appears to be crushed blue velvet or crumpled black taffeta, or a silvery lame'. And then again, like today, we seem to be bobbing along on tough old grey elephant hide. Near the board, where the water is churned up as we dive into the swells, there's always an aqua blue and white marble effect. Our ship leaves a path of foamy white ruffles in its wake..and just aft are our tag-along friends, half dozen albatross that skip and soar and sometimes ride on the crest of waves. We can't conceive of these birds having winged their way so far from land and keep wondering when they will turn back.

"They've had movies every night. Last nights' movie was Hit Parade of 1943, which you'll remember was my first film. The film was so old and worn out and out of sync, I was only too happy I hadn't told anyone I was in it.

"We are supposed to cross the International Date Line soon, and of course, a whole day is lost of our trip. The fog horn has been blasting the past two days for we've gone through a continuous thick fog. Today it is bumpy and rough and some new seasick customers showed up in sick bay.

"The latest report is that we are to reach Yokohama by Nov. 2. If that is so it means a wonderful gift for me on my birthday...to see land! It will take one or two days more to reach Nagasaki. As you know, the city was almost entirely destroyed by the second atomic bomb and I don't see how our surroundings can be very pleasant.

"I was standing at the rail in yesterdays' sun and there was nothing to dot the horizon...just endless water. A moment later I had such a start I couldnt' believe my eyes. There, perched on the rail no more than 3 feet away from me was a beautiful little brown and yellow canary. He stayed still and stared at me. He was so tame I was certain I could reach out my hand and he'd hop onto it. But, as quickly as he'd appeared he took off, high up over the crowsnest and out of sight. All I could think of was that we must be near the Canary Islands! I will have to have the appearance of this little bird explained to me, for I'm mystified as it is now. The albatross are still with us!

"I went to the first class offered in the Japanese language. We are learning only a few useful phrases and words, greetings, how to order food, etc.

"We are to be in Tokyo Bay tomorrow about noon and will drop anchor for a few hours, then on our way to Nagasaki, then possibly my next stop will be Korea.

(signed) Dale

Dale Lefler remained in Japan one year to the day, and his next chapter of his autobiography related his experiences climbing Mount Fuji...and "skiing" down the volcanoe's lava slopes in his rubber army boots. A grimmer side of his army occupation days was viewing the destruction of beautiful Japanese temple art and artifacts.

I can't help but think of our present armed forces in the first throes of a "new" war. What will be the outcome? To keep a tenuous peace?

Stonepine resort gets OK to add two more guest units

STONEPINES ARE grand, elegant Italian trees that aptly convey the image of Carmel Valley's hotel with the same name.

Stonepine Inn is often referred to as a place with elegance for the elite, said Dirk Oldenburg, managing director. "There is some of that, but mostly there's a sense of relaxing at a country estate."

The relatively small hotel recently got approval from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to add two guest units, bringing the total to 14.

"The new units will definitely help," said Oldenburg. "We were just too small to take on executive meetings and conferences."

One unit is ready to be used, and construction for the other will start sometime this summer. In addition, the board agreed to allow for renovation of the former Tularcitos School adjacent to hotel's entrance.

Gorden and Noel Hentschel, owners of Stonepine, will make the school their home.

Oldenburg said that concern about traffic and water impacts on the community was minimal. He said the changes would actually reduce water use and traffic. The school accommodated about 30 students and teachers. The Hentschels have six children.

There are no future plans for adding more guest accommodations, said Oldenburg. "We have exhausted our possibilities considering water and traffic. We are struggling like everyone else, and are very concerned about the water shortage."

Conserving water has not altered the hotel's 330 acres of beauty. Just beyond the inn's gates is a beautiful garden and a row of Stonepines brought from Italy in 1929 by Henry and Helen Potter Russel, the original owners of the property.

"The facility provides total privacy," said Oldenburg, "a romantic hide-a-way."

Milk Shrines of Old Carmel

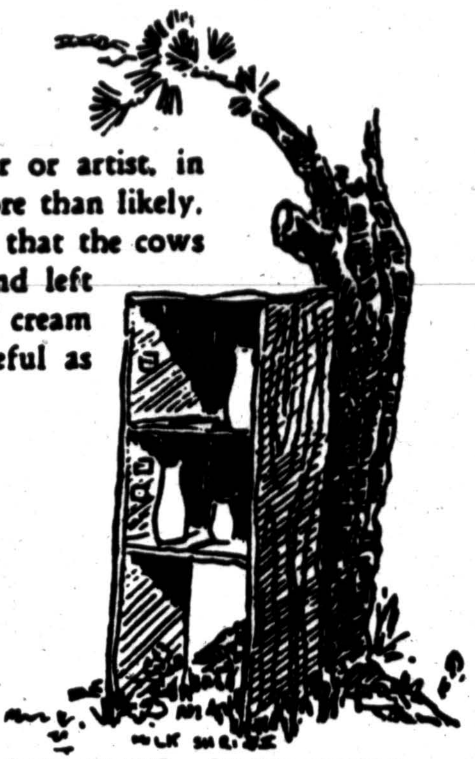
THE FIRST Murphy Committee has received a priceless donation: a milk shrine! And exactly what, you query, is a milk shrine, and how does it apply to Carmel?

Milk shrines became an institution in early Carmel, when they were used for the delivery of milk to private residents. Rather than leaving the milk at the back door (a service available locally until well into the 1960s), the milk was placed in a community box containing several orders.

The surrounding neighbors would pick up their morning deliveries individually, in its place leaving their next order and payment. The arrangement worked beautifully, as described by Daisy Bostwick and Dorothea Castelhun in their book Carmel – At Work and Play (originally published in 1925), republished by Lacy Williams Faia, now in its fifth printing.

The Milk Shrines.

To the newcomer, they look like little empty open-faced bookshelves set on stilts. Slightly withdrawn from the footpath,, or sidewalk if such there be, the milk shrines stand in lonely patience under the trees, one to every two blocks. The shelves are divided into pigeon holes with real or imaginary partitions separating them, and the name of the claimant to the space thumbtacked to the back of the compartment. Here every evening gather the bottles, each with its exact twelve cents or a neat little milk ticket. The following morning out sallies the writer or artist, in bathrobe and slippers more than likely, to find with satisfaction that the cows have made the rounds and left him his daily portion of cream or milk. Almost as useful as these modest shrines is



MILK SHRINE. BY IRA REMSEN.

(Reprinted with the kind permission of Lacy Williams Faia, publisher.)

The shrine donated to the First Murphy was originally owned by none other than Mrs. Ella Reid Harrison, the well-known local resident whose bequest made Harrison Memorial Library possible. Widow of Judge Ralph Chandler Harrison, Mrs. Harrison wanted the library to honor and memorialize her husband.

Mrs. Harrison lived on the southeast corner of Camino Real and Ninth, where she died when her house burned down in the 1920s. The late Mariam White Herrick, a neighbor of Mrs. Harrison, remembered her as "an elegant woman of means and taste...(who) dressed in mourning for her husband."

Mrs. Harrison's distinctive milk shrine "was carefully shingled and roofed – other people had a grocery box." (Unpublished memoirs, reprinted courtesy of the family.) An early photograph of Mrs. Harrison's shrine shows it in use, filled with milk bottles.

The milk shrines varied in appearance from the simple to the more elaborate. Mrs. Harrison's was definitely upscale, appropriate to her position in the community.

Many long-time residents recall the shrines fondly, but most of the small structures have disappeared into the mists of time. Since retirement, Mrs. Harrison's shrine has led a quiet life near its original home, in the possession of the late Mrs. Herrick's family.

The family is generously donating the shrine to the First Murphy, for future use as yet to be determined. Now in a state of some disrepair, Mrs. Harrison's milk shrine will be refurbished to its former glory. Mariam Melendez, Mrs. Herrick's daughter, hopes that the shrine will be a fitting addition to the First Murphy.

Enid Sales, First Murphy Committee chairwoman, agrees. "The shrine's placement near an appropriate, contemporary home will help complete the picture of an early Carmel scene," she stated.

Ms. Melendez adds that the location of the First Murphy, on Lincoln near Sixth, just steps away from Harrison Memorial Library, is a happy coincidence, placing in close proximity two very different Harrison legacies to the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Interestingly, the library was also built by M.J. Murphy,, with Bernard Maybeck.

The First Murphy was the first house designed and built by M.J. Murphy, Carmel first master builder/architect shortly after the turn of the century. In June 1990, the home was moved to make way for a new store. Lifted up on a crane and set down on a flat-bed truck, local residents proudly escorted the First Murphy down the three blocks to its new site on Lincoln Street. A street party celebrated the occasion.

The city will transform the site to a beautifully landscaped park, including restrooms. The First Murphy Committee, sponsored by the non-profit Carmel Heritage, will start work on renovating the structure in March for use as a local club house.

Planning Commissioner Brian Congleton has donated his architectural services to the renovation of the home; Howard Carter &

THE FIRST MURPHY

Associates of Monterey has donated the structural engineering services.

Other professional services are sought for the actual construction, and those wishing to contribute their services are encouraged to contact Enid Sales at 625-0566.

An anonymous benefactor increased the First Murphy funds by $19,000 last month, reports Jim Gregg, chief fund-raiser. That extremely liberal gift brings the fund-raising effort to over one-third of $75,000 goal.

To benefit the First Murphy, a fashion tea at the Highlands Inn is being planned by Saks Fifth Avenue Carmel, at 4 p.m. on March 4. The tea will feature the spring designs of Stanley Platos and Martin Ross. Tickets, at $20 each, are available from Carmel Heritage, 3820 Whitman Circle, Carmel 93923.

The efforts of local residents and businesspeople have been outstanding, clearly demonstrating the community support for this unique joint architectural preservation venture between public entities and private citizens.

Donations of all types – ranging from rare gems like milk shrines, to generous checks from anonymous angels – are gratefully accepted by the First Murphy Committee on behalf of the people of Carmel, with the intent of preserving our irreplaceable historic and architectural heritage.

Peninsula art museum trains docents

The docents of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art are eager to share their volunteer experience with persons of like interest. Docent training, a seven-week orientation program for both men and women, is now taking place. Hours are 10 a.m. to noon at the museum, 559 Pacific St., Monterey. Additional sessions will take place on consecutive Mondays through March 18 (except Feb. 18).

Docents serve as volunteers, working three hours each month in the docent office, conducting tours for adults and children, providing Tea Cup tours for senior citizens and assisting with research and the installation of exhibitions. They also enjoy educational programs, exhibition briefings and field trips.

Those interested may obtain application forms from the museum office or by contacting Training Vice Chairman Dianne Mueller, 624-4383, or the Chairman, Susan DuCoeur, 624-3708.

Music scholarship auditions set

The Monterey County Branch of the Music Teachers Association of California will provide an opportunity for string students to receive cash prizes in the scholarship auditions to be held at the Carmel Woman's Club.

There are four age categories with the maximum age 18 years. Except for the youngest players who need to play two memorized pieces, all others are required to perform three memorized pieces from three contrasting style periods.

Monterey County string teachers are encouraged to contact Mildred Kline at 624-9541 as soon as possible for further information about the competition, ages and dates. It is not necessary that teachers belong to the Music Teachers Association.

There will also be a piano competition. Piano teachers should contact Donna DeVicenzi at 375-3213.

DORIS DAY'S BEST FRIENDS

By Doris Day

Inspired by love

LAST WEEK I was asked to answer some questions for a magazine interview. One of the questions has been asked time and time again and I always enjoy answering it because it has to do with the animals.

Now that I'm a "columnist" with an "audience," I thought you might like to have a preview of the interview in Meditation Magazine. The question: What inspires your love for animals? And the answer:

You can pick up a little mutt on the street that you've never seen before and be inspired by the love in its eyes, the depth of its soul, its innocence and purity. They come into this world pure and they leave it pure; they come in innocent and they go out innocent. You can't say that about most people, but the animals maintain that spiritual beauty throughout their lives.

I'm also inspired by their joy. It seems to take considerable effort for people to find real joy and many never do. The animals, on the other hand, find happiness in the smallest pleasures. A pat on the head, a kind word or warm smile. A walk on the beach or a ride in the car. A ball game in the yard, a chewie by the fire, a warm bed. Speaking of warm beds, when I think of the people who shut their pets outside and never consider them a member of the family, I could say a few words unfit to print.

Through the years I've wondered why God put the animals here. When you think about the sad lives many of them lead you have to ask yourself that question. They have no rights. They are "used" for medical research. Millions are euthanized.

Why? Well, I've come to this conclusion, and I really believe it was God's plan for us to learn from them and emulate. Maybe one day people will awaken and realize what precious creatures they are. Maybe one day they will all be cherished and protected and valued for the perfect beings they are.

PERFECT PEOPLE, PERFECT PETS

Finding homes for homeless dogs and cats is a difficult business. Sometimes even the most "perfect" pet has to spend days, weeks or even months in a cage waiting for the right owner to come along. That waiting takes even longer when an animal has a handicap or physical problem that requires treatment and attention.

Unfortunately, many people expect to adopt a "perfect" pet.

DORIS' BEST FRIENDS

Their list of requirements is long and specific: Must be housetrained, shorthair, no shedding, no barking, no chewing, no unruly behavior, and very often, must weigh no more than 15 pounds.

Then we are asked, "What is this dog's background? What do you know about it?" What I would like to answer is, "I'll tell you what his background is if you'll tell me yours." Of course, I can't say that but I would like to.

We always report everything we know about the animals we place. But unfortunately, all too often we have no information. We have to learn from the animal's behavior. A skittish, frightened dog or cat is reacting to feelings of fear and obviously has not been treated with loving care. An excessive barker, a nipper, a jumper, an aggressive animal are all needing something and require a tremendous amount of love, compassion and insight into that need. We see this as a challenge to be met and we are contantly looking for qualified, loving people to help.

"Chips" is an adorable cocker spaniel who has problems with his eyes, ears and feet. He requires a special amount of TLC and regular medical care. We recently placed him in a lovely home and made the family well aware of his special needs. They were thrilled to have him and were eager to be his caretakers. Well, just after a few weeks Chips has been returned to the foundation. The reason: Too much work.

"Susie," a delightful Dandy Dinmont mix, was found wandering the streets of Prunedale. She ended up in the pet foundation and when I saw her, it was love at first sight. She came home with me! She is glorious and an absolute joy but not long after, she had her first seizure. She is receiving medication and still has seizures now and then. The point is, of course, that you don't give up when there is a problem, you find an answer. When your children become ill or disabled, you care for them, make them comfortable, help them get well. The same commitment and responsibility applies to your pets.

We have lots of animals who need love and care. Are you up to the challenge? Call us at 625-4017. We'd love to speak with you.

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles.)

"CHIP" is a neutered male, 5 years old, chocolate brown-colored, cocker spaniel whose owner died.

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT

By D. Patrick Gallagher

Survival strategy

SADDAM HUSSEIN will not win this war...but then he never thought he would. Having been given the wrong signal by the Bush Administration in the first place, he had more to gain from fighting and losing this war than he did from withdrawing from Kuwait.

To withdraw loses him prestige among the poorer, and more numerous, Muslims. To fight and lose makes him a hero and martyr. That was clear to even the most casual observer of Middle Eastern politics months ago. All the rhetoric about his ''not getting the message'' was just that, rhetoric. If President Bush didn't know that when he issued his ultimatum, he should have. Saddam was in a no-lose situation.

Having drawn us into this war, he is now refusing to fight it. His best aircraft are still protected in bunkers or safe in Iran. His Republican Guard is taking a pounding, but entrenched infantry and armor can survive even the most brutal of air assaults. The Air Force has never won a battle or a war without ground forces. In Vietnam, B-52's ''carpet bombed'' whole areas before an assault. When the Infantry went in, following days of such bombing, the North Vietnamese regulars came out of their bunkers with little discernible damage and fought effectively. Saddam's strategy is a survivor's strategy.

Saddam Hussein expects to be around when this war is over, and he expects to have a still potent military machine to insure that his influence remains equally potent. How will he achieve this?

To begin with, he does not expect us to invade Iraq. He expects to be driven from Kuwait by force and to pay a high price in dead Iraqi troops (he paid a higher price in his war with Iran), while inflicting a lesser price on us. He has said he will lose 500,000 soldiers and we will lose 100,000. He is satisfied with those numbers. In fact, he is probably right about our stopping at the Iraqi border.

It would be lunacy for us to attempt to occupy 120,000 square miles of Iraq, or to bog down in a desert war. The price is too high even for this Administration. It would be lunacy for us to attempt even to occupy Baghdad. It would become a cause celebre to greater terrorism around the world.Our presence in Iraq would make Iran very nervous, perhaps prompting it to come to Iraq's aid, sticking our second foot in the Arabian tar-baby. It is not a fate we would want to tempt.

One of the great fallacies of this conflict is the lack of discussion about what happens once Iraq is driven from Kuwait. Bush has offered no explanation. Saddam, on the other hand, has already planned for this inevitability. He will still have the Republican Guard and other troops in relatively good condition. He will bring his air force out from their bunkers and call home his best aircraft, which have been flown to Iran. He will still be a major force with which to contend. In the end the war will have served only to increase his stature among the majority of poor Arabs and to increase their resentment of our allies in the Gulf states, who have invested their oil proceeds in western real estate instead of helping the Arab masses. It will result in efforts to overthrow or assassinate the sheiks of those states and put in jeopardy moderates such as Hosni Mubarak in Egypt. Egyptian feelings against the U.S. are rising each day the war continues.

If Saddam survives personally, he will have greater prestige than ever before. He is, after all, the only Arab leader to strike inside Israel with missiles. This is the first time a Mideast war has brought destruction to Israeli cities. No Israeli-Palestinian solution will be possible without his participation. Even the future price and flow of oil from the Gulf, that which we feared most, will be influenced by the constant threat of another invasion. The Saudis and the Kuwaitis will make peace with him and give him what he wanted in the first place, access to the Gulf and control of the Rumallah oil fields.

Why, then, one might ask, don't we finish him? If we can arrange his death, we probably will, but he has proved elusive for 20 years. In fact, we can't afford to see a completely destroyed Iraq. Such a fate would create a vacuum into which would come major landgrabs by Syria, Iran and, perhaps, Turkey.

Such moves would threaten a larger conflict and destabilize the region even further. We, therefore, have a vested interest in a reasonably strong Iraq at the end of this conflict. In fact, we are doomed to end this war worse off than we began it, and it did not require much thought to realize this before we struck. We became captives of our own troop deployments and ultimatums, made precipitately.

Oh, we will be victorious in ''liberating'' Kuwait for its oil-rich sheiks, and there will be many speeches about having punished aggression, but the always prudent and pragmatic sheiks will be more interested in pleasing Saddam than us. It will be a Pyrrhic victory at best and, please God, a not-too-expensive one. We will have fought a war which was unnecessary, which never addressed the region's basic problems, which acheived only the most limited objectives at great cost and which changed nothing.

Sound familiar? When history reviews the ''miscalculations'' and the ''messages nobody got,'' it will be more likely to find fault in Washington than in Baghdad and, if they look carefully, so will American voters in 1992.

It keeps more than
alive.

Gathering of the clam

SOME STILL choose to call the first event of the five-day-long festive tribal gathering by the name the great crooner gave it: "The Clambake." No one can remember if clams were ever part of the rite but as it is with most traditions the name has taken on a sacred meaning.

Nowadays though, the younger ones have renamed this first ceremonial evening the "Tee-off Party." by definition it is a family of friends who come together once a year to rekindle the strong medicine and good vibes that have carried them through many seasons of the legendary tournament. The old ones boast of the many years they have given to the event. Twenty-five, 26, each one bettering the other. The young ones have raw oyster-eating contests and scan the room for celebrities.

"Is that Dennis or Randy Quaid? Tom or Dick Smothers?"

"Who ARE Tom and Dick Smothers?"

"You know, they're the guys who do those commercials for TV sets."

"Yeah, well I heard that Alice Cooper and Iggy Pop were supposed to be here but they cancelled at the last minute."

This year's kickoff had a Mexican theme. Volunteers fortified themselves for the many days they would spend at their assigned posts. They ate and drank and toasted the gods of greens, tees, bunkers and plus-fours while some of the more refined tribal elders attempted to eat juicy Mexican fajitas without dripping on their blue blazers. Tamales, guacamole, chicken mole, shrimp, oysters on the half shell, and two-drinks-a-piece warmed up everyone up for the evening's traditional performance.

Meanwhile an infiltrator attempted to interest some partiers in what he claimed to be an authentic, genuine "Cypress Tree Logo" T-shirt straight from Ocean Avenue in Carmel. The infiltrator claimed great powers would be bestowed on the lucky person who wore it. Tribe members scoffed. They knew the real, copyrighted "Cypress Tree Logo" owned by Pebble Beach Co. in the only, true logo.

It was time for the performance. Local favorite Pat Duval called for the traditional gathering of the clan and they streamed into the theater, the elders to seats of honor near the stage and the younger tribe members clustered in the back of the huge room.

Traditional songs of patriotism, Anchors Aweigh, Stout Hearted Men, and Off We Go into the Wild Blue Yonder, were sung and our young fighting soldiers remembered (12 had died that day). Duval introduced the witch doctor, Gatlin, who called for High Priest Harris to come out. Some thought High Priest Harris had already gone to the great putting green in the sky and cheers were heard when he appeared. Harris retold some of the old stories and waves of laughter rolled up to the stage to greet him.

"The jokes are old," Harris quipped, "but the audience is new." Which proves there's more than one way to keep the AT&T Tournament fresh. Another way would be to ask Huey Lewis and the News to join the roster of entertainers on stage.

Phil Harris, who proudly admits to 86 summers and 40 tournaments, had lunched with Ted Durein the day before. Durein, who is responsible for bringing the Pro-Am to the peninsula, announced an upcoming birthday to his friend Phil. "I'm going to be 82 next week," Durien said, "Keep your fingers crossed."

Gatlin stirred the crowd to a frenzy with some of their favorites: Boogie Woogie Under The Monterey Peninsula Moon, Houston and All The Gold In California, and kept them there all evening as he introduced a succession of performers well known to the clan.

Craig T. Nelson tried to sing Amazing Grace and called the audience his "soulmates." Kenny Bob Davis wore the yellow ribbon of peace on his lapel and told funny stories from the deep south. Rosemary Clooney brought memories back to some with her rendition of favorites like Sentimental Journey, These Foolish Things, Hey There, and the 1951 chart-buster, Come On A My House. Dave Johnson and his smart-mouthed singing monkey raised the level of absurdity enough for "Yo-Yo-Man" Tom Smothers to bring the house down with a "rocket to the moon" stunt that required deep pockets. Three nights later Smothers would be challenged at the "Decanter Party" by some otherwise straight-laced types who came close to out "yo-yoing" the "Yo-Yo Man."

All in all, it was the kind of show pros might put on for their relatives at Christmas time. A little rough around the edges, a fun, family thing. A few inside jokes, a lot of laughs and love for one another, especially the 1,600-plus volunteers who make the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am Tournament what it is today.

FAIRWAY FROLICS

DIANE Stracuzzi, director of public relations at PBC, broke the jinx. She handed out umbrellas on behalf of AT&T to members of the press as they checked in for their credentials and it rained for the first time in more than a month.

DRY-eyed locals were dazzled by the green fairways at the Pro-Am. "I know it rained this morning, but our lawn doesn't look like this." The 18th at Pebble glowed emerald green as the sun filtered through a misty gray sky, illuminating the Fuji blimp hanging over Stillwater Cove.

CARMEL High student Jeremiah Pendleton was working the Carmel Youth Center "Bing-Mobile" concession stand at the 5th on Pebble when Huey Lewis overshot the green. In between cash sales for candy bars, Polish dogs and sodas, Jeremiah had been watching for Lewis to come by, hoping to snag an autograph from his rock star idol. Lewis' lob hit the "Bing-Mobile" squarely, sending the 15-year-old bounding out the door to see who was responsible. It was Jeremiah and Huey, face to face. Jeremiah pointed out the location of Huey's golf ball, exchanged high-fives, and magnanimously gave the singer two Polish dogs.

ROCCO MEDIATE has been a front-runner at Pebble twice and he figures the third time will be the charm. Meantime, it's off to the next tournament for Rocco, Linda and 4-and-half-month-old Rocco Vincent. The Mediates make their permanent home in Ponte Vedra, Fla. (Ray A. March photo.)

Coast & Country

THERE was a futile request for plain breakfast muffins in the Press Room during the tournament. After some confusion and delay the catch-all "budget cut" was given as the reason for their unavailability. My advice, next time ask for chocolate tulips or a strawberry tree, F&B line items at the "Garden Party" this year.

WEARY Pro-Am winner Paul Azinger was explaining the ins and outs of his game to the bleary-eyed press in the interview room as his daughter, 5-year-old Sara Jean, fresh as a daisy, conducted her first "behind-the-scenes" tell-all in the press tent just outside. She even made sure the reporter spelled her name correctly.

ANOTHER Jeremiah story. Eager to help raise funds for the Carmel Youth Center he was puzzled when some folks came up to his window and said they were boycotting the Poppy Hills course because all the concessions there had been contracted to an outfit from Los Angeles. Jeremiah inquired further and was told there were no Carmel Youth Center concession stands at Poppy Hills even though in past years "Bing-Mobiles" had been on all three courses: Cypress Point, Spyglass and Pebble.

TO those locals who wonder why they're never invited to play in the Pro-Am: Thigh-slappin' Southern humorist Kenny Bob Davis hung around the Volunteer Hospitality Tent last year pickin'-and-a-grinnin' and lo and behold! This year he was invited to play! He credits Voluteer Hospitality Assistant Chairperson Margo Daniels for having the inside track.

JOAN Sailer's annual ("Crosby") AT&T Party was almost a "smashing" success. The Sailer's guests, over 100 of them, watched as AT&T Chairman of the Board, Bob Allen, dropped his ball into the Sailers' yard, which fronts the 13th fairway on Spyglass. Allen stepped onto the patio to take his next shot; the white missile struck a pine tree, ricocheted off the house, and missed Shirley Vitt's head by inches. Allen walked off fuming and local Tony Russo put the near-fatal rocket in his pocket.

PARTY ONE-UP-MANSHIP

Old-timers love to compare one year's tournament parties to previous Pro-Am wing-dings. A Pro-Am party-pro shared these ratings with "Coast & Country."

Number One – "Stuart Tent Party" – Evidently tent companies know more than how to match all those little pegs to the right holes in the canvas.

Number Two – "Oldsmobile Party" – Great food, and impromptu entertainment.

Number Three – "Decanter or Bottle Party" – An informal get-together for the golfers, celebs and tournament guests. This is the one where Tom Smothers was almost out yo-yoed.

Number Four – "Pebble Beach Party at Spanish Bay" – A disappointment if you're a celebrity watcher, but it was elegant and fun; especially if you were lucky enough to catch the bevy of attentive businessmen gathered around Cosmo representative Ted Honda. One man, wanting to relate, was balancing a glass of wine, and trying to eat his hors d'oeuvres with chopsticks.

Number Five – "Garden Party" – Country French, fresh, food was excellent. Local politicos provided the action and re-action.

Number Six – "Volunteer Tent Un-winding Party" – A tent under the trees, sawdust on the floor, Country & Western band, finger food and free beer. The atmosphere is the same as the "Tee-Off Party" but somehow more apropos; a feeding frenzy is fun in the great outdoors.

CBA INSTALLS

The noise level at La Playa went slightly off the sound meter when outgoing Carmel Business Association President Kathie Ritter challenged CBA members to get involved, go to city council and planning commission meetings and let their voices be heard.

CBA members cheered when Alan Richmond of KMST-TV, who acted as master of ceremonies for the annual Installation Dinner

Dance, introduced new President Gary Luce, who called 1991 the "Year of Participation" for the Carmel business community.

The business ball is rolling already, with an overwhelming response to the request for committee members to work on this year's CBA promotions and events, including a golf tournament jointly sponsored by the CBA and MP Chamber of Commerce, scheduled for June 7.

Don't forget to stop by the new offices of the Carmel Pine Cone, between 5 and 7 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 7 for the first Carmel Business Association "Mixer" of the year.

FOUND ART

Gary Quinones's show at the Cherry Foundation puts the saying, "one person's trash is another's treasure" into practice. He recently opened a show at the Cherry Foundation utilizing objects he has found at rummage and garage sales.

Asked if he clips the weekly garage sale listings from the newspaper and makes the rounds, Gary replied, "I get in the car and if I see a sign along the road, I stop. It's very spontaneous." Gary's fresh perspective has resulted in art objects utilizing bathroom scales, sneakers and garage doors.

His clear eyes serve him well, and not just when he's searching through a pile of "stuff" on a folding table in someone's front yard. Gary teaches sculpture, both traditional and non-traditional, at Monterey Peninsula College. New to the area, he has already recognized the need for a gallery space, dedicated to showing the work of young peninsula artists.

"There is so much local talent," Quinones reminds us, "but no place for them to exhibit."

Pat Boles, chairman of the art department at MPC is in charge of a fund-raising effort to respond to Quinones and others like him. She would like to develop a gallery at the college to serve emerging peninsula artists. Call her at 646-4215 to discuss her plans.

FIFTY-FIFTY, WHAT?

Effective March 1st next, the Monterey Peninsula Associated Banks will put into effect a monthly charge of 50 cents on all accounts showing less than a daily average balance on $50.

Also there is now effective a regulation that cost of imprinting on checks must be assumed by the customer. The bank will continue to supply the checks.

SADE'S SHOULD PROSPER UNDER NEW MANAGERS

Sade's Restaurant, an integral part of Carmel, was sold last week to Margaret and Bert Dienelt.

When beloved Sade Latham died last November of a heart attack, there was much speculation about the eventual disposition of her business. Milt Latham is an architect, no a retauranteur, and it was hardly in the cards that he should want to carry on the business which had been so identified with his wife and her career in the theater. It was equally unthinkable that an utter stranger would take over the place which Sade had made a tradition in Carmel by her unfailing touch.

EWE WINSOME, EWE LOSE SOME

Lydia the lamb is not an ordianary lamb (even beyond the fact that she is actually a full-grown ewe and no longer a lamb).

Just ask her. She will answer with a definite "moo." Yes, a "moo," not a "baa."

Lydia has lived with Jersey cows so long that she has shed her primary language to join the mooing crowd.

Lydia is loveable and loves people, especially children. Lydia is becoming thoroughly spoiled at her new home at All Saint's Day School.

If Mr. Eastwood becomes mayor of Carmel does this mean that upon arrival to the city limits of Carmel eveyone will be issued a gun for one hand and an ice cream cone for the other?

CARMEL CITIZEN OF THE YEAR CELEBRATION SET

The third annual Citizen of the Year Award party sponsored by the Carmel Residents Association will be held Sunday, Feb. 10th from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Scout House (northeast corner Eighth and Mission).

This year the Selection Committee is comprised of CRA President, J.S. Holliday and the award recipients of the past two years, James Wright and Joyce Stevens. The citizen chosen need not be a member of the CRA or be nominated by a member and may live in either Carmel or in its sphere of influence.

The nominations this year again cover a variety of activities, cultural, social, and political and are witness to the many civic contributions made by the nominees as worthy of recognition. The criteria remains the same, based primarily on City Ordinance 96 which states that Carmel's residential values and quality of life be maintained.

However, this year the celebration takes a further step as for the first time, the residential-serving businesses that have remained under family ownership for 30 years or more will be honored.

Entrance tickets are $5, refreshments included, and are available from board members or at the door. Again we hope this will be one of the most enjoyable social/civic events of the year.

The award winner will remain a secret until the February 10th party, as will the names of the businesses to be honored for their many years of service to Carmel residents.

CARMEL VALLEY POST OFFICE CELEBRATES 50TH

The Carmel Valley Post Office will celebrate its 50th anniversary on Sunday, Feb. 10 with an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Rosie's Cracker Barrel, site of the valley's first post office, then called Robles del Rio.

Rosie's Cracker Barrel is located just past Carmel Valley Village on Esquiline Road just across the Carmel River (at Rosie's Bridge).

The open house is being sponsored by the Carmel Valley History Society. Hors d'oeuvres will be served.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed William I. "Rosie" Henry to be the first postmaster of this little fourth-class post office with a grand total of 24 patrons, according to the history society. The post office name was not changed to Carmel Valley until June 1, 1952..

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

No man is an island...

From the Feb. 10, 1983
Carmel Pine Cone

Oh almighty and eternal God, be pleased to bless this food to our use. Direct your love that is within us to bring mankind unity and peace.

St. Paul of Tarsus lived long before Rotary, but in a letter to his own people, the Hebrews, he wrote these words that can apply to our Carmel Rotary: "We must consider how to raise each other to love and good deeds. We should not absent ourselves from meetings, as some do, but encourage one another all the more because, you see, it is later than you think."

This is my own translation from the Greek, so if you disagree, check with the original manuscript.

St. Paul also wrote: "The Lord said to me that my strength is sufficient for you. Strength is made perfect in weakness. I will glory in my infirmities with insults, hardships, persecutions, distresses, for when I am weak then I am strong."

No doubt you have your own examples of the great, famous and successful who have succeeded despite handicaps. Recently, the prize-winning motion picture Chariots of Fire dramatized the lives of Harold Abrahams and Eric Liddell, who overcame social and physical handicaps to win gold medals in the 1924 Olympics.

My favorite success is Flannery O'Conner of Georgia, a great novelist of this century, who gloried in her infirmities. Let us thank God for both our strengths and weaknesses. However, they have no value unless we use them for the good of our neighbor.

Finally, George Bernard Shaw, the cynical Anglo-Irishman, wrote in Pygmalion: "Independence? That's middle class blasphemy. We are all dependent on one another, every soul of us on earth." Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

In an effort to overcome absenteeism and turnover among its reservation agents, a nationwide motel chain decided to encourage older people to apply for the jobs. The chain found it had to overcome skepticism, because of the oldster's previous experiences of being rejected elsewhere because of age. One prospect decided to investigate by calling the chain's toll-free reservation number and asking the age of the woman who answered. When told "78," the still-skeptical caller asked for her supervisor, who turned out to be 73. About one quarter of the chain's 600 reservation agents now are over 60. Absenteeism is down to three percent nd is down to three percent and agents average three years on the job.

Liner notes on a compact disc recording of classical piano selections include an account published in 1899 by a newspaper in Leipzig, Germany, of the remarkable piano talent of a very young boy. The compact disc selections of Bach, Beethoven and Chopin were recorded this year by the same Mieczyslaw Horszowski, who also gave a Carnegie Hall recital in celebration of his 98th birthday.

ARTS & LEISURE

Maestro Suttle takes turn as county symphony soloist

THE MONTEREY County Symphony will perform Richard Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg"; Johann Matthias Sperger's Concerto for Contrabass and Orchestra in A Major; and Robert Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor, Opus 120.

The performances will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 10 at King Hall, Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey; at 8 p.m. Monday, Feb. 11 in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel; and at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 12 in Sherwood Hall, 940 N. Main St., Salinas.

Maestro Clark Suttle, music director of the Monterey County Symphony, will make his California debut as a doublebass soloist performing a concerto composed by Johann Matthias Sperger, a contrabass player in Franz Joseph Hadyn's orchestra at Esterhazy.

Suttle has appeared as soloist with the Richmond Symphony Orchestra, Toledo Symphony Orchestra, and Buffalo Philharmonic; most recently, he performed the Concerto for Doublebass and Orchestra by Serge Koussevitsky with the Sealands Symphony Orchestra, Copenhagen, Denmark.

A child prodigy, Suttle won numerous awards including the Bronze Medal of the International Performance Competition in Geneva, Switzerland – the youngest contestant and the only American to receive a prize. He was the first person to win the featured soloist with the Michigan Youth Arts Festival Orchestra three years in a row and the first bass player in the history of the University of Michigan to win the University Orchestras Competition. He studied with Lawrence Hurst, now professor of music at Indiana University. (Mr. Hurst did the arrangement of the Sperger Concerto to be performed at these concerts).

In addition, Suttle served as principal bass with the Flint Symphony Orchestra and the Canary Islands Opera Festival. His many recital performances have included engagements at Carnegie Recital Hall, the Conservatory of Music in Geneva, Switzerland, and the Saint Cecilia Society of Grand Rapids, Michigan. A specialist in works by Bottisini, Suttle has performed all the major works for the doublebass as well as contemporary music and transcriptions of works for other instruments.

For the Sperger Concerto, Suttle will perform on a doublebass made by Jacquet-Gand in Paris during the 1850s. Its French origin and the fact that it spent more than 60 years in an attic minus its head caused Suttle to name it "Marie Antoinette" upon its purchase from the Cincinnati instrument restorer, Dave Horine, in 1970.

Conducting these Monterey County Symphony concerts will be German conductor and composer, Volkmar Fritsche, municipal director of music for the City of Balingen, Germany where he serves as conductor for several South German regional orchestras, a chamber orchestra, and opera chorus. He is director of a music school and lecturer at the Conservatory of Trossingen.

Fritsche studied conducting and composition at the Musikhochschule Stuttgart and Freiburg, continuing as a Fullbright Scholar at Brandeis University. In 1962, he won the Koussevitzky Tanglewood Composition Prize. Among the many orchestras he has visited as guest conductor are the Radio Orchestra Baden-Baden, the Stuttgarter Philaharmoniker, the Wurttembergishe Philharmonie Reutlingen and the Nurnberger Symphoniker. His compositions have been published by several firms.

Now in its 45th Season, the Monterey County Symphony is the fully-professional orchestra serving all of Monterey County.

Tickets are available by calling the Monterey County Symphony office, 624-8511. Single Tickets to these concerts are $7.50 t0 $20.

Oriental Art Society revisits cultural hot-spots of Asia

THE ORIENTAL Art Society of The Monterey Peninsula has enlarged its purpose to include not only the arts, but also the geography, history and culture of Oriental lands and peoples. In that vein, the February meeting of the society will be a slide-illustrated report to the members on the recently completed "Asian Canter." The "Asian Canter" was a 32-day expedition to Japan, China, Burma, and Thailand to benefit the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

The meeting will be held in the community room of the Crossroads Shopping Center at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 12. Coffee, tea and cookies will be served from 7:30 to 8 and the one-hour program will begin at 8 p.m. Guests and visitors are welcome and there will be no charge.

Information on membership in the society will be available. Everyone interested in increasing their understanding, appreciation and enjoyment of Asian arts and culture is encouraged to join. The society meets monthly, normally on the second Tuesday, and usually in the Crossroads Room. The March meeting will be a presentation on China's pandas and the programs intended to protect them.

April will feature "tea tasting" with a talk by Ione Kramer, co-author of the recently published book, All The Tea in China. The May presentation will be by Carole and Duncan Todd of Monterey who attended the "First International Ceramic Festival" held in October at Jingdezhen, the centuries-old and very famous, Chinese "Porcelain Capitol."

The "Asian Center," subject of the February meeting, was scheduled to view the fall colors in Kyoto's temple gardens, travel up the Yangtze Gorges on a new cruise ship, meet the once-weekly flight from Kunming, China to Bangkok, visit Burma after the monsoon season, and attend the annual elephant round-up in Thailand.

Fortunately, the schedule did accomplish these things and fortuitously it resulted in near perfect weather and visibility on the Yangtze and Daning Rivers, avoided the highjacking of the next day's flight from Bangkok to Rangoon, and completed the Burma leg before the "next" earthquake hit Mandalay. And the 150 Thai elephants were in exceptionally "good form!" It was also accomplished before the "War in the Gulf" heated up with the increased danger from terrorist activity that has been reported from both the Philippines and Bangkok.

Members of the expedition who reside locally will show slides, photographs and purchased "treasures" as well as recount some of the more interesting experiences on this five-country trip.

Red hot and cookin'

C.J. CHENIER, son of the late, great "King of Zydeco," Clifton Chenier, makes his first appearance on the Monterey Peninsula, opening with his Red Hot Louisiana Band for Buckwheat Zydeco at a Mardi Gras party Monday, Feb. 11 at Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row. Chenier, who took over his father's band after his death and like his father also plays the accordion, has a new release out on Slash, Red Hot that keeps alive and kicking his father's tradition of Tabasco-hot zydeco music that is true to its bayou roots. Tickets are available in advance at Doc's (649-4241), or at the door, at Center Stage Ticketing (649-5561) or at all BASS/TM locations. Doors open at 8, show starts at 9.

'Sacred Vessels' shown in Carmel

THE LEDBETTER Gallery will present the latest works by Ania Malkowska, a local ceramic sculptor. The exhibition will open on Saturday, Feb. 9 and run through March 5.

The Ledbetter Gallery is located in Carmel, in Bonnymead Court, on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh Avenues and is open Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. The show is entitled "Sacred Vessels," and reflects Malkowska's interest in both human vulnerability and spiritual aspirations.

In this showing of Malkowska's most recent works the pieces range from a monumental height of six feet to a delicate six inches. Every piece, large and small, is animated by the artist's personal vitality, for she is determined that her work should reflect the force of life as she feels it. Her themes evolve from the interplay between human aspirations and the awesome power and mystery of nature.

Malkowska's "Sacred Vessels" seem truly to represent the fragile crucible that carries the human spirit. Her work creates environments of sanctity and power in which those vessels may be housed for rest and meditation.

Commenting on the theme of temples in her work Malkowska said, "I think that people need refuge, a safe place to contemplate the sacredness of individual life. Nature is huge and powerful and we are so small, yet we are an integral part of it."

The Ledbetter Gallery was opened in Carmel nearly one year ago by Emy Ledbetter to serve as a showplace for her own paintings and works of other local artists.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Outstanding woman

FOR THE FIRST time, someone from the jazz community has been chosen as an Outstanding Woman of Monterey County.

The honor for Teri Waros was made known via a letter to this column from Robin Rosenzweig and Dee Gibbons, who serve Monterey County Commission on the Status of Women by cochairing the Outstanding Women Selection Committee.

That letter came here because it was your present reporter's pleasure to suggest Teri after commissioners sent out nomination papers some months ago.

After all, Teri's position – jazz booker at Monterey Bay Club – always was dedicated to helping female artists gain ground within a traditionally macho field. This single mom taught herself the job by borrowing albums, listening, listening, scouting off-peninsula talent, reading, listening more, asking countless questions of various old jazz hands.

(Teri today has another role at the hotel. No problem, said a commission spokesperson. Assumption: she'd embody ''the same principles and qualities wherever she went.'')

''I'm amazed,'' Teri said, ''and grateful to the commission. The other women (selected) have given so much. I'm glad that jazz has been noticed in this way. The art form's important. I thank the music and the creative women and men behind its lasting worth.''

Robin and Dee's letter said: ''It was an inspiring and lengthy process to select the Outstanding Women of Monterey County. As cochairs of this committee, we can quite truthfully say that every woman nominated was deserving of the honor. This year we are proud to be celebrating the fifth anniversary of this exciting event. We look forward to its ongoing success.''

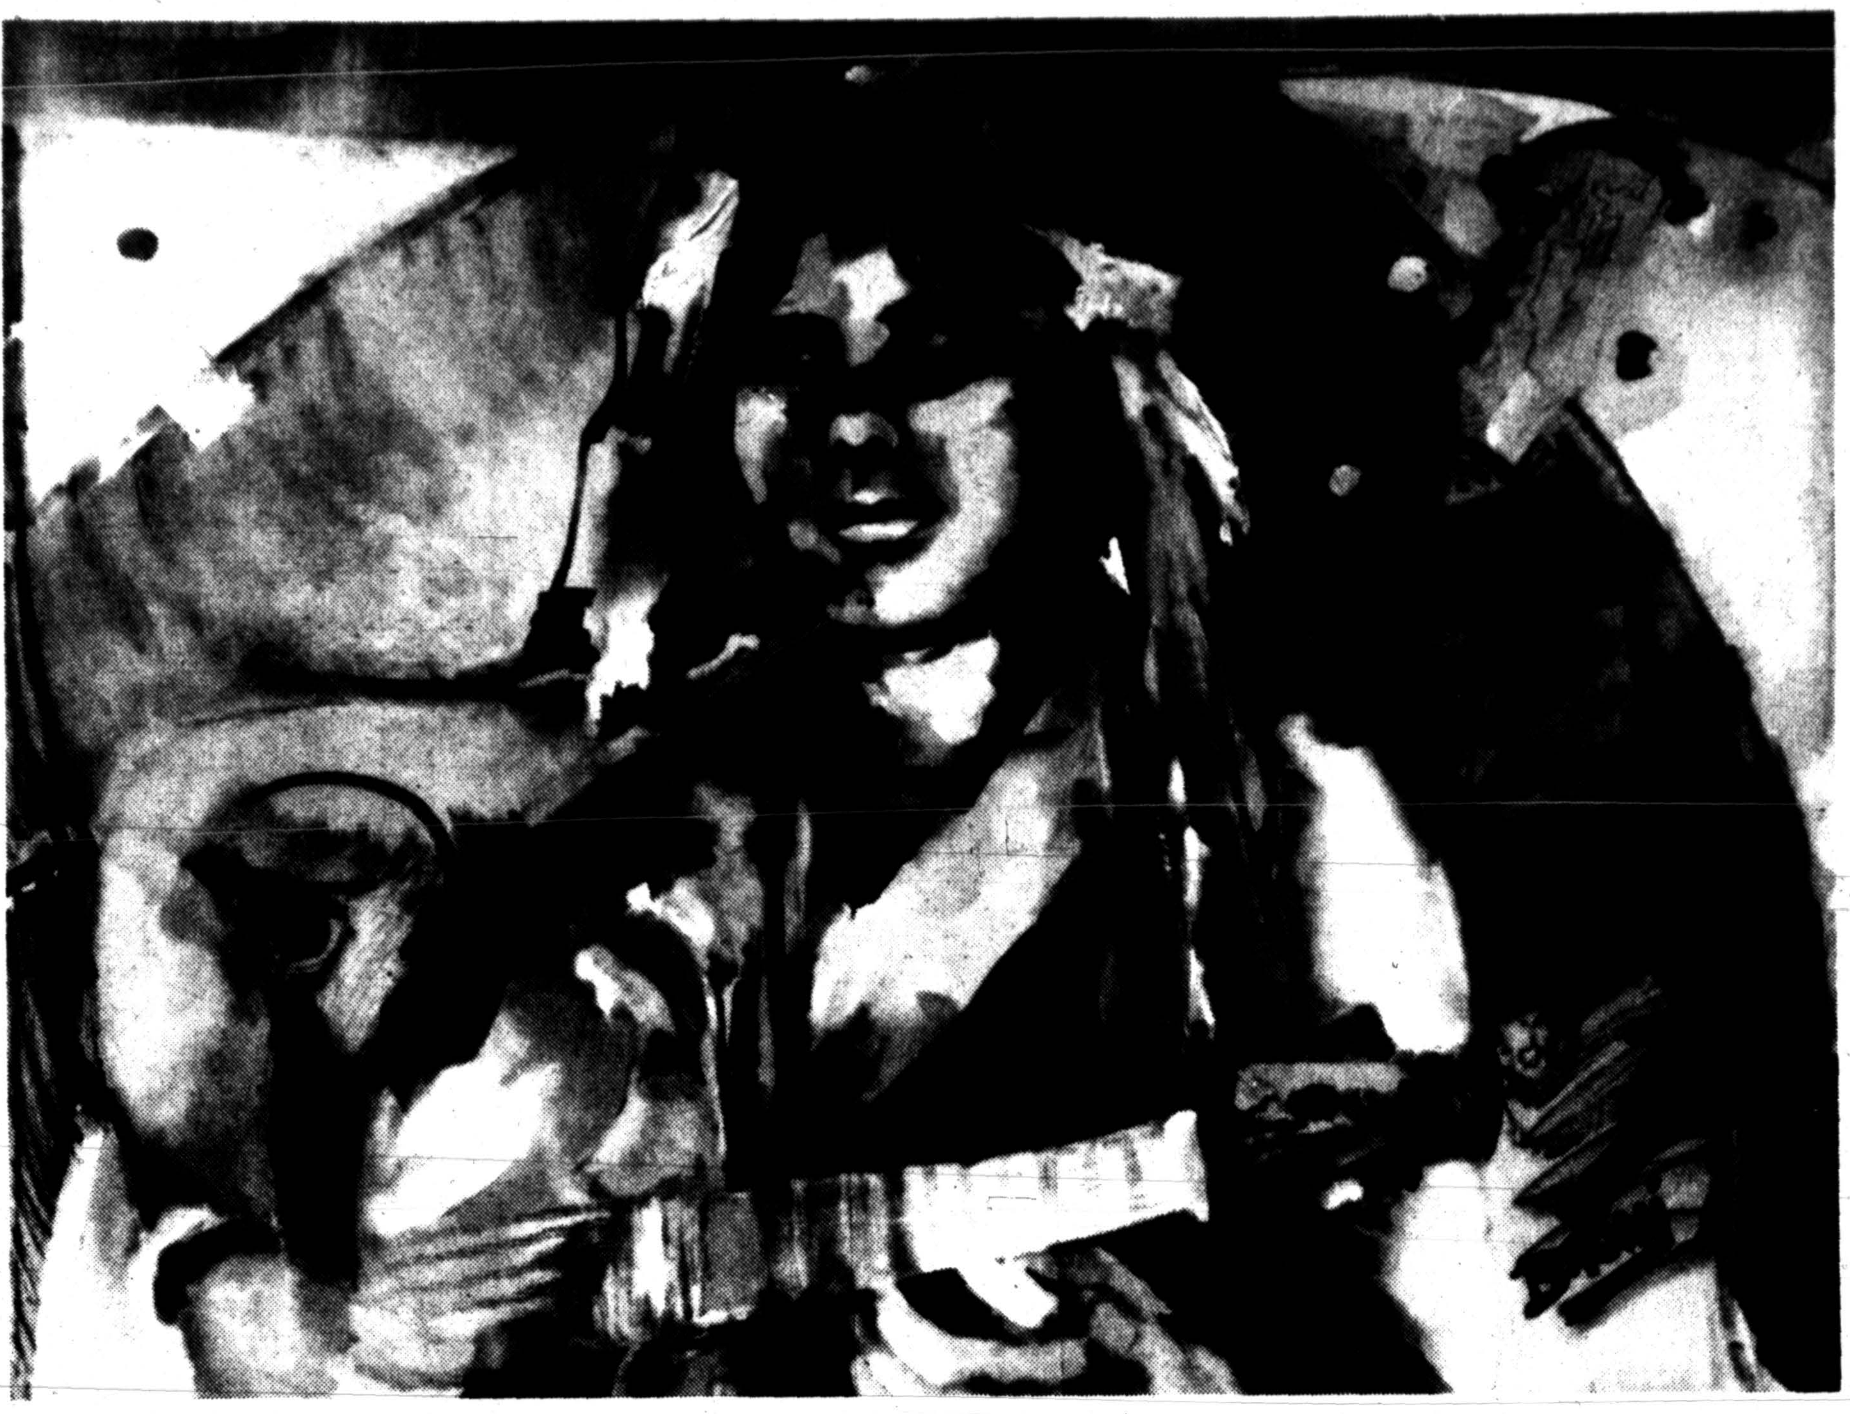
A public occasion spotlighting the 10 women will be held early next month (Sunday evening 3/3) at Monterey Plaza Hotel. The program begins at five o'clock with a reception following.

GEORGE MALONE recently left the management team of Shanty Malone's, attractive restaurant and jazz venue in Valley Hills Center (beside Quail Lodge). Overseeing the operation: Chef Ken Weeks and his wife Vicki. Their five daughters will pitch in too.

Ken said jazz nights will be retained on a regular schedule – trumpeter Ron Coolidge's group (Tuesdays), unit fronted by drummer Dottie Dodgion (Thursdays through Saturdays), Papa Jake (Sundays). New faces were being auditioned to fill out the slate.

Ken said George still would be an ''inactive partner.'' Malone already has moved his motorhome to a rural site deeper into Carmel Valley.

The award-winning chef said some additions would be made to the Shanty Malone's menu. The Weeks family's made up of straight-ahead, delightful folks. May they enjoy the success they deserve.



STRONG WORK – jazz artist Bruni Sablan did this visual memorial shortly after guitarist Emily Remler's untimely death last year in Australia. Now Bruni reports that Concord Records has contacted with her for two more Remler portraits that'll be used as album covers.

KUUMBWA JAZZ Institute of Santa Cruz announces its Winter Jazz Performance Workshop under the direction of vibist and bandleader Rob Lautz. Sessions will be held from 7:30-9:30 on Wednes-

A black comedy of 19th century morals framed within the story of a very proper, real-life Parisian matron forms the foundation for La Parisienne. The sly wit of playwright Henri Becque dissects bourgeoise life in the 1890s, domestic and bureaucratic, without using a single unseemly word.

The Staff Players Repertory Company brings Becque's triumph to the stage of the Indoor Forest Theater in Carmel.

The cast includes Marlie Avant as Clotilde Du Mesnil, Alan Smith as M. Lafont, Jason Bond as Adolph Du Mesnil, Cynthia Womack as Adele and John Farmanesh as M. Simpson.

Final performances are set at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays until Feb. 9.

Hotter'n Tabasco

TUESDAY, FEB. 12 is Fat Tuesday, Mardi Gras for all you revelers out there, but it'll come a day early on the Monterey Peninsula.

That's because on Monday, Feb. 11 Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row will be hosting a wild Mardi Gras party featuring none other than two Louisiana bayou originals, zydeco stars Buckwheat Zydeco and C.J. Chenier and The Red Hot Louisiana Band.

Buckwheat's latest album, his third, on Island Records, Where There's Smoke There's Fire features a duet with country star Dwight Yoakam on Hank Williams' Hey Good Lookin' that's a kick. The album starts off in high gear and keeps it going like Cajun chef Paul Prudhomme when he's fixin' blackened catfish – in other words, smokin'.

Buckwheat even manages to throw in a faithful version of the Rolling Stones' Beast of Burden and a lively and ragged Route 66. The Stones go zydeco – hold me back Lucille!

Buckwheat, who has opened on tour for Eric Clapton and U2 and has even appeared on Late Night with David Letterman, brought in Los Lobos frontman David Hidalgo to produce his latest and the professionalism and talent shines through. Not what you'd call a traditionalist, Stanley "Buckwheat" Dural has fashioned a potent brew of zydeco, rock, R&B and blues. Some view him as more rock than zydeco, but there's always that accordion leading the way – you show me a rock band that has an accordion as the lead instrument.

Not to be outdone, Doc's has seen fit to open the show with the red-hot C.J. Chenier, who has a new album of his own out, Hot Rod. Although in a more traditional vein, Chenier's new recording still has enough spice and juju to keep the image of his dad, "King of Zydeco," Clifton Chenier, burning bright. His background in R&B gives his version of the band a little more zip. Chenier, who played saxophone and served as bandleader for his dad's band, took up the accordion and the reins after his dad died in 1984 and has been touring as leader of The Red Hot Louisiana Band ever since.

ZYDECO HOTSHOTS Buckwheat Zydeco (above), and C.J. Chenier will bring the fiery music of the Louisiana bayous to the Monterey Peninsula with a Mardi Gras party set for a 9 p.m. lift-off, Monday, Feb. 11 at Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row.

This is probably the best opportunity – and atmosphere – to see these two young rising stars of zydeco up close and personal. Both The Catalyst in Santa Cruz and Slim's in SF will feature the two bands this month, but they're cavernous compared to the intimate Doc's. Then there's that drive...

Bring your dancin' shoes and Mardi Gras beads and dress the part if you like, there's a costume contest with a $100 prize as well as Louisiana food.

Tickets are $15 in advance or at the door, available at Doc's (649-4241), Center Stage Ticketing, Lighthouse Records in PG, Do Re Mi Music in Carmel and at all BASS/TM outlets.

Lift-off is 9 p.m. for C.J., about 11 for Buckwheat.

GIL RUBIO tells me that his blues band will play a short one-hour set down the street at the Monterey Brewing Co. that same night. That's at 8, so you can see Gil and the boys, then high tail it to Doc's to catch C.J.'s opening. Do I have it down to a science or what?

ON TAP for February at Doc's: Jerry Jeff Walker and the Gonzo Survivors on Feb. 18; Flamenco/jazz guitarist Ottmar Liebert on Feb. 19; and the return of guitar whiz Robben Ford on Feb. 24. Also don't forget that The Cubes, the best cover band around, with guitarist/vocalist Thom Ayres leading the way, play regularly at Doc's. In February: 7, 8 and 9, and 14, 15 and 16.

THE CATALYST in Santa Cruz has its usual eclectic lineup for February, including Blue Oyster Cult, Feb. 11; Kate and Anna McGarrigle, Feb. 12; Buckwheat Zydeco and C.J. Chenier, Feb. 15; Zasu Pitts, Feb. 16; Bela Fleck and the Flecktones Feb. 17; Blues Traveler, Feb. 19; Robben Ford, Feb. 20; Ottmar Liebert, Feb. 21; The Tubes, Feb. 22 and Mary's Danish Feb. 24 and Jellyfish March 1.

Info for Catalyst shows is at 423-1336 and tickets can be purchased in advance at BASS at The Wherehouse on Lighthouse Avenue in New Monterey.

JAZZ CRITIC John Detro passed the word on that Jack Dougherty of Carmel – he discovered and produced the Carpenters – has died. Services are set this week.

Romantic art exhibited

Romance! Who needs it? Perhaps we all do, but for many of us it's a feeling we encounter too infrequently. Through April 21, the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art will exhibit, in the Work Gallery, works of art that explore the complexities of romance reflected by the lives of the artists that created them.

Desire, seduction, true love, longing and fancy will be depicted in the paintings, graphics and sculptures on display in the Work Gallery.

This exhibit was curated from works available in Northern California galleries and collections and includes the work of Michael Mew, Paul Pratchenko, M. Louis Stanley, Mark Stock, Inez Storer and many others.

Selected photographs by artist William Heick will be on display in MPMA's Lower Entry Gallery to April 14.

MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin

Orford String Quartet: front-runners all the way

THE ORFORD STRING Quartet is billed as Canada's foremost quartet and they would have every right to that description almost anywhere. Presented last Friday night in Sunset Theater by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula, they gave a performance that was outstanding in any comparative system, front-runners all the way.

The Quartet, with violinists Andrew Dawes and Kenneth Perkins, violist Sophie Renshaw and cellist Desmond Hoebig, chose a program of the last quartets written by Mozart and Beethoven and the latest quartet of the Canadian composer R. Murray Schafer.

Mozart's Quartet in F Major K. 590, his last work in this form, was one of three he wrote on commission from the King of Prussia, a fine amateur cellist. It is music of consistent good humor and contains unusual virtuoso elements for the cellist, as might be expected. The first impressions made by the group were of vitality, grace, elegance of spirit and great musical unity. Though they often projected tonal delicacy, there was also underlying strength and purpose to their Mozartean concept. The ensemble was extremely close-knit and musically aware.

Viola and cello carry the melodic elements of the Andante and here they provided a fine foundation for the pristine clarity of the more florid violin parts. The subtle humor of the oddly measured material of the Minuet was successfully outlined and the flying 16th notes of the perpetual motion final Allegro were played with brilliance to round out a fully first class interpretation, giving far more substance to this composition than it is usually awarded, but which it deserves.

Canadian composer R. Murray Schafer is a prolific composer with a wide range of interests and his latest work, the String Quartet No. 5 (Rosalind), also written on commission, had been premiered by the Orford Quartet. Schafer proved to be a skilled and sophisticated writer for strings, obviously knowledgeable of the instruments' idiomatic vocabulary and then employing most of it in his music, thereby requiring performers who are very well versed and technically able.

The music is varied, ingenious and frequently quite interesting. There were moments of beauty and drama, intensity and quiet, and generally these were difficult to coordinate and keep cohesive. The Orford players had its rather contrived sounding, but entertaining pages well within their grasp.

Beethoven's Quartet in F, op. 135, was his last completed work and is one of my favorites. It begins with conversational exchanges between the instruments, here played sweetly and with expository smoothness and beautifully sensitive, disciplined ensemble. There was great flexibility in the mercurial changes in and out of the body of brief motifs which make up the movement.

The Scherzo was given a light, airy flavor with sudden accents and syncopated rhythms, all exactly where they belonged. This was a concept closer to the Mozart (incidently written in the same key) than one usually gets here and it was equally valid. The Lento was pure sounding and quietly serious. The phrasing was clear and the players seemed to breathe as one balanced, eloquent voice, commanding hushed attention.

The fourth movement is introduced by the fateful musical question "Must it be?" asked very quietly by the viola and cello. It is answered "It must be" by the violins with dramatic emphasis. Then came the Allegro, which though still serious in tone, mvoed rapidly to another emotive questioning episode and a brilliantly executed triumphant coda.

In response to the large audience's appreciative applause, a "Waltz" by Dvorak was played as an encore. It was very sad to learn that the Orford Quartet plans to disband at the end of this season. It is a major musical loss.

ART NOTES

By Sam Colburn

Every little movement

WHAT IS FEELING in art? This is not so easy to define. The artist, Ben Shahn, wrote a book entitled The Shape of Content. I remember an artist who lived in the Big Sur, I think his name was Bob Nast, who drew little lines in black ink. They were one-half to one-inch long. Every little movement had a meaning all its own.

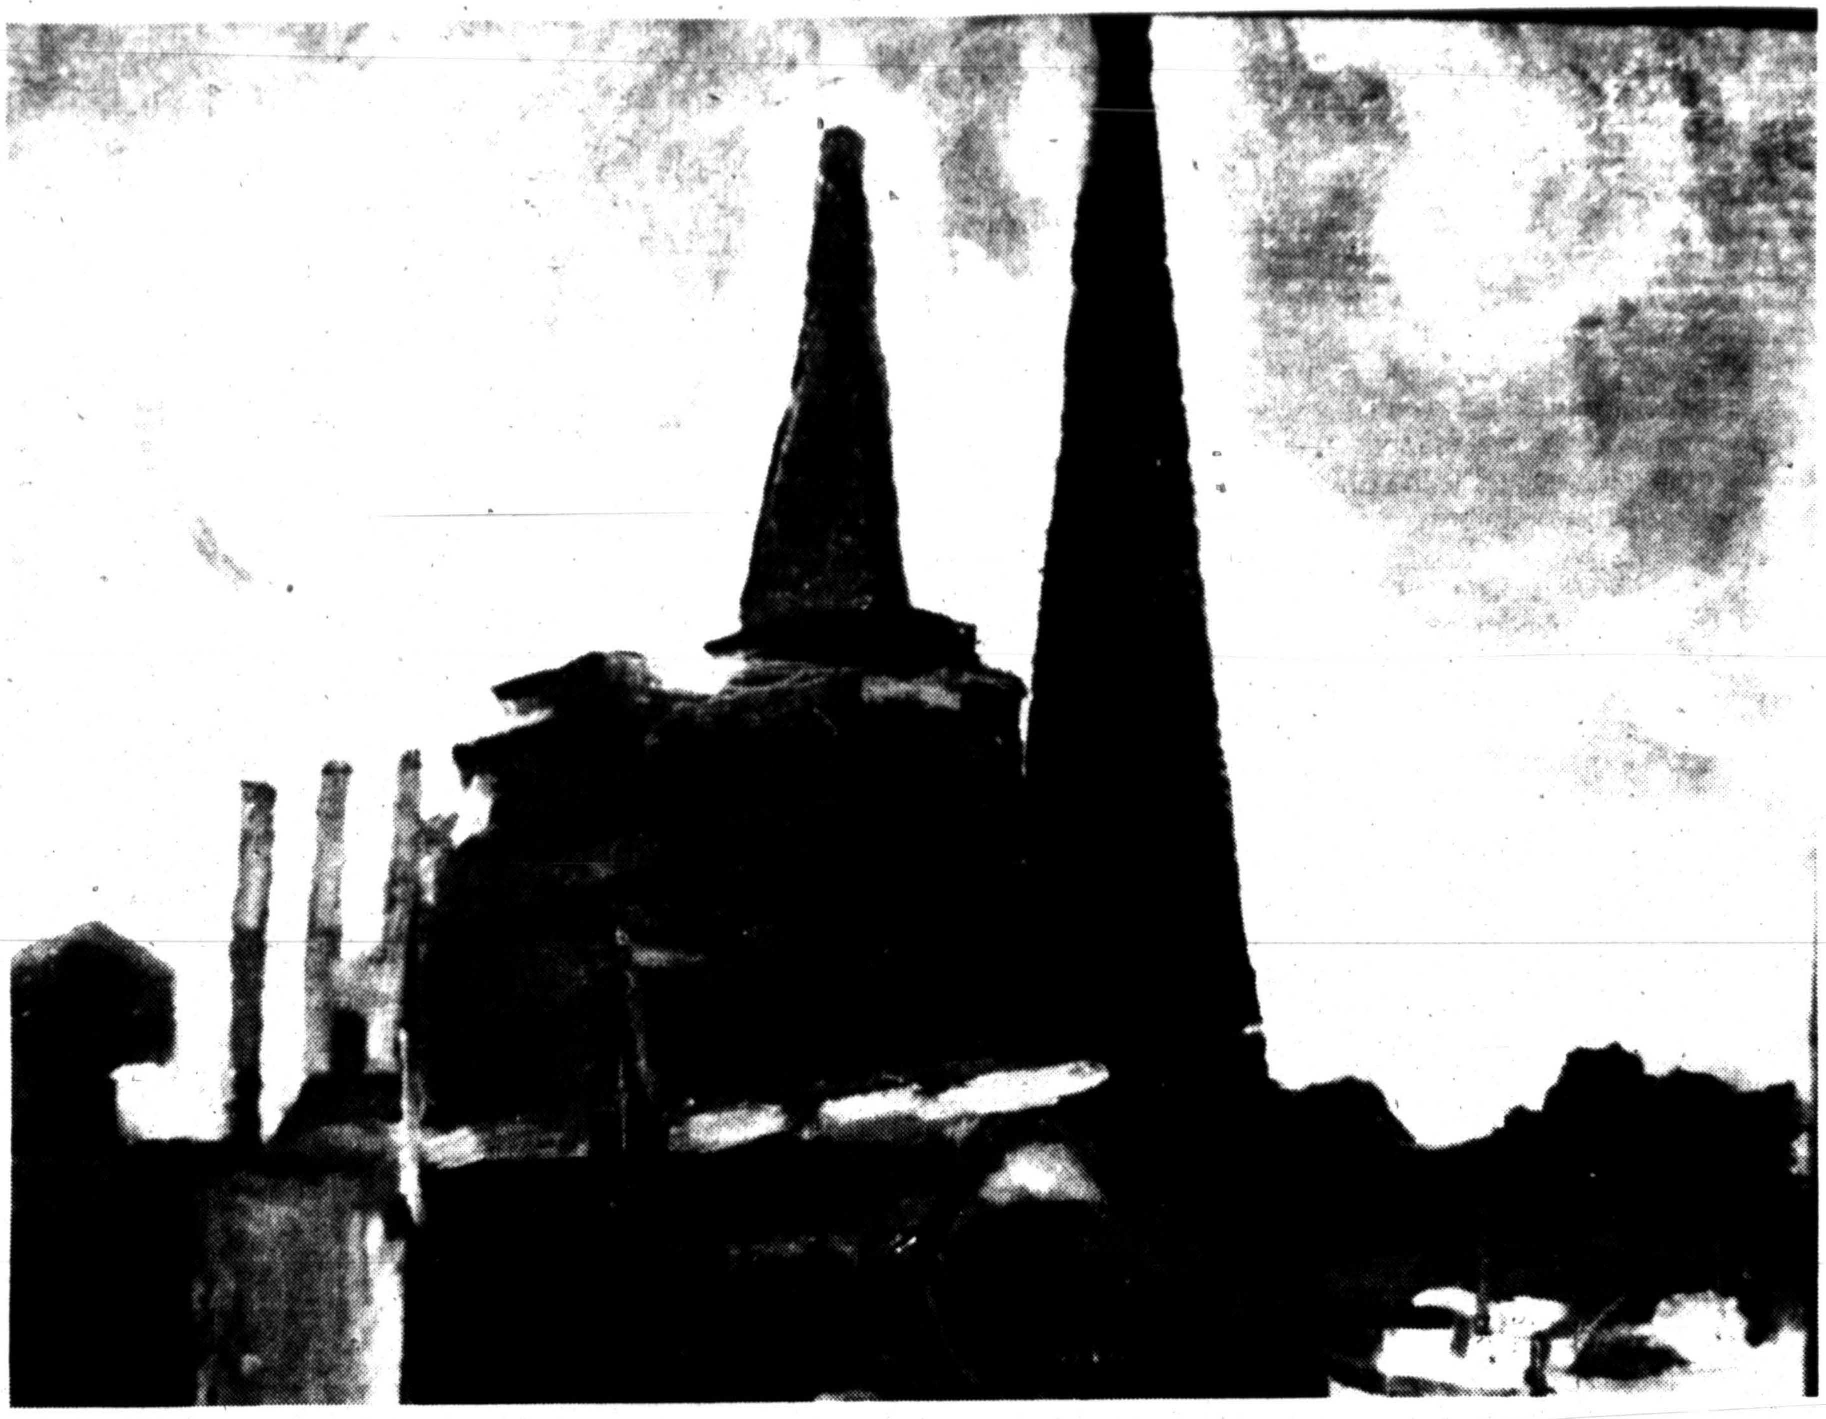
It seems to me that feeling is disappearing. Not from sculpture but from non-figurative non-objective work. The problems of space involved in the contemporary use of the picture area often seem more important than any emotion.

I WAS VERY happy to wander into the Claypoole Freese Gallery in Pacific Grove and see work that filled this emptiness. It was the painting of Bay Area artist Bruce McGaw that brought me back to the world of figurative painting. There were two large oils in which he used male figures. The colors are muted, but they work with each other to create power and calm an unusual union.

Many painters feel that their colors should scream. The McGaw works are present but not on the walls. You can also see the large oils of Joan Savo in which there is often a bright flare of light against colors that meld into one another.

The Claypoole Freese Gallery hangs paintings of regular members such as Barry Masteller, Jerry Richman, Carolyn Berry and others. Each one of these artists presents their own unique imagery.

OVER AT THE Pacific Grove Art Center Carl Bowman has a large and comprehensive retrospective exhibit of oils. He is a mature artist who started painting in San Francisco when he was in the plumbing business, then having retired came back to painting. His palette is, for the most part, low key. He has gotten the peace and tranquility of the scene in El Estero. He gets the feeling of each area in which he works in Garland Park, with lavenders and greens, and the hills opposite Molera Park in the Big Sur. The central cypress trunk is very effective in this painting. He uses broad swatches of color to delineate form – the blue of the bay sets that area well back.



MOSS LANDING is among the venues captured by Pacific Grove artist Carl Bowman. A retrospective exhibit of his oil paintings can be viewed through Feb. 15 at the Pacific Grove Art Center, located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. in downtown Pacific Grove. For details, call 375-2208.

John Steinbeck wrote The Pastures of Heaven, a series of stories about families that lived in the Corral De Tierra. Carl shows an oil entitled Steinbeck Valley. It is a circular composition centered around a ranch that I have painted many times.

Chico and Chocolate Factory are very bold with heavy pigment. Old Fisherman looks a little like Sam Colburn. In Kathy he has used warm and cool color on the face to very good effect. Mary's Christine has the feeling quality of the model, and Smiling Girls is rhythmic. Carl is very involved with that old fashioned duo Form and Feeling.

Across the hall the Elmarie Dyke Gallery is showing the work of the Plein Air League. Joseph Nordman, who frequently paints in Pacific Grove, uses broken color to achieve a simulation of sunlight, especially in Caledonia Street. Happily enough he has not been trapped by the Victorian architecture.

Edward Norton Ward exhibits watercolors which are crisply defined. I was impressed by an oil, Dockside Boats which has depth. The pink ladder works well, and the water and reflections on it insinuate liquidity. This is not so hard to do in watercolor but hard in oil.

Will Light is part of this group. He uses warm and cool very nicely in Pescadero Point. Church of the Wayfarer Steeple has good values of light and dark.

This exhibit will be on the walls through the 15th of February.

THERE IS A CURIOUS show at the Grimes Gallery at Seventh Avenue and Dolores in Carmel. The pieces shown look rather like photographs but are drawn with charcoal and pastel. The artist, Tobin Keller, uses plant forms as his subject matter. I have not seen this done before.

The shapes are much larger than life size. It is rather like being introduced to a world that you had never consciously seen. The flower parts are all against dark. The lead work, Opium Skulls, is composed of a rectangle of four pod forms. The tulip forms are very convoluted.

Tobin has also done some monochromatic drawings in this series. These study the effect of a single color. His images are poetic and powerful.

This show will continue through March 30.

Side Trips

FISHERMAN'S WHARF

It's a colorful conglomerate of shops and restaurants, a theater, fish markets and diving boats, sea birds and mammals.

The views, from a building interior or from the open end of the Wharf, are very much a part of this "walk over the water." In addition to the marina, often with every berth filled, other craft from rowboats to cabin cruisers bob at anchor on every side of the wharf.

Fishermen can do their thing two ways. One is to rent rod and reel, buy bait on the Wharf and dangle a line over the railing at Wharf No. 2. The other is to board one of the regularly scheduled party boats for deep-sea fishing. Five tenants at the far end of the Wharf run fishing trips which leave dock at 7:30 a.m., most of them every day.

POINT LOBOS RESERVE

Known as "the greatest meeting of land and water in the world," Point Lobos (so named because of the barking colonies of California and Steller sea lions – hence Punta de los Lobos Marinos – point of the sea wolves in Spanish) is world-renowned for its unequalled beauty.

The reserve comprises 1,250 acres of completely natural coastal and inland habitat located on the south end of Carmel Bay. It is a unique outdoor museum, containing important colonies of sea lions, the protected California sea otter, and the breeding grounds of the California brown pelican. Over 300 plant species and 250 bird and animal species have been identified here. Admission to the reserve is $5 per day per vehicle; $3 if there is a senior citizen in the vehicle. Hikers and cyclers are admitted free. No pets are admitted into the park. The reserve is located approximately one mile south of the Carmel River Bridge on Highway 1. Open daily 9 a.m.-5 p.m., 9 a.m.-7 p.m. in the summer. Picnic tables available. No cooking permitted. Divers must obtain a permit at reserve headquarters.

Since protection of the reserve's fragile ecology is extremely important, visitors are asked not to collect, remove or even disturb any object in the reserve, including flowers, driftwood, rocks and shells. To avoid unnecessary damage to the reserve's natural features, please stay on designated trails. Sturdy, comfortable footwear is recommended.

Free nature walks are available throughout the year. For information, call 624-4909. .

SANTA CRUZ

On the northern-most curve of Monterey Bay lies the city of Santa Cruz, site of the Santa Cruz Mission, founded in 1794.

A visit to Santa Cruz offers fine opportunities for swimming (Santa Cruz Main Beach is known as California's safest for swimming because of the gentle surf with no riptides or undertow), sightseeing, picnicking and enjoying the scenic beauties of several state parks and beaches.

Natural Bridges State Beach: One of Santa Cruz's most famous. Pounding surf carved the natural bridges out of native limestone. Excellent for beachcombing, swimming and picnicking.

Roaring Camp: At Graham Hill Rd. and Roaring Camp Rd., in Felton, just east of Santa Cruz, features a re-creation of a historic narrow-gauge logging railroad. The authentic steam locomotive takes you through 187 acres of virgin redwood forest. Fare is charged. 1-335-4484.

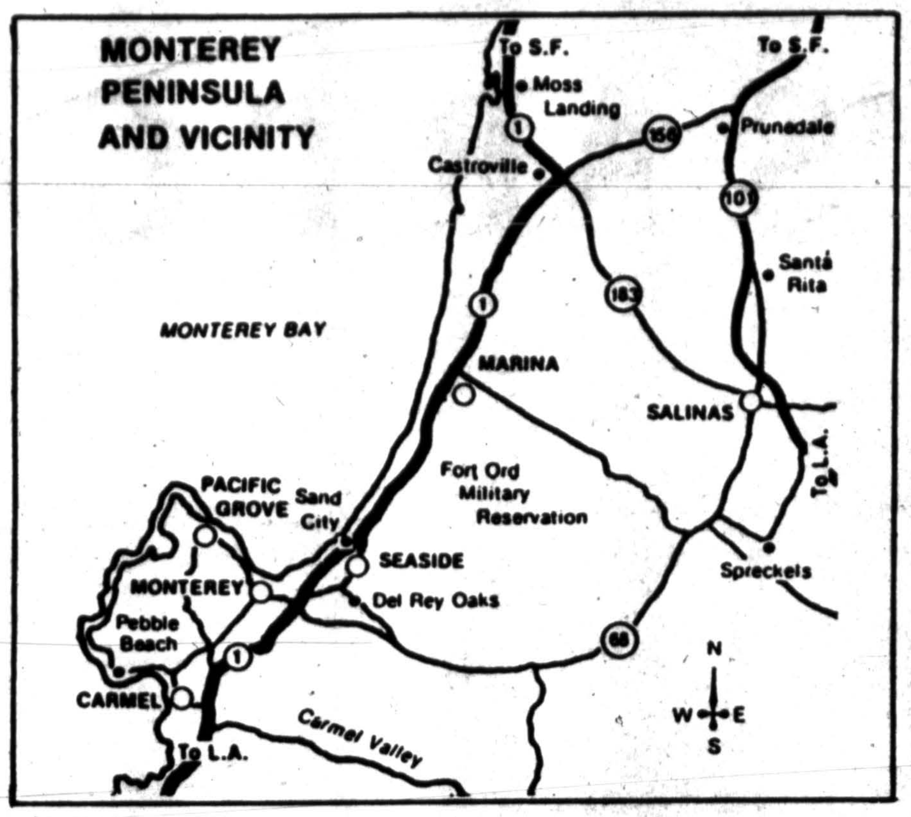
Santa Cruz Boardwalk: Features a roller coaster and many rides and attractions. The Boardwalk is located on the Main Beach. 1-423-5590.

Other attractions: Lighthouse Point, the boundary between Monterey Bay and the Pacific Ocean; Fisherman's Wharf; the Museum; Big Basin State Park, oldest in the state park system, offering majestic redwood trees and fine family camping; and the University of California Santa Cruz campus.

SAN SIMEON

San Simeon, built by William Randolph Hearst at a reputed cost of more than $30. million, is now a state historical monument. Several different tours are offered. Tickets for the tour may be purchased at the monument, but advance reservations are always advisable, particularly on weekends and during the summer. California residents can charge reservations to Visa or Master Card by calling 1-800-444-PARK between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily. Out-of-state callers should call (619) 452-1950.

Reservation application forms may be obtained by calling the toll-free information number or by writing to Reservations, Dept. of Parks and Recreation, Box 942896, Sacramento 94296-0001. Take highways 1 or 101 south to visit "The Enchanted Hill."



PINNACLES NATIONAL MONUMENT

The last remnants of an ancient volcano, carved into spectacular pinnacles and spires by rain, wind, heat and frost, rise against the sky. A trip to Pinnacles can be a fine one-day trip from your Monterey Peninsula base.

The Pinnacles can be explored through a network of well-marked trails of varying length and the visitor can enjoy a pleasant outdoor picnic before the return trip. For information call 1-389-4485.

The public campground is available on the west side of the park, coming in from Soledad. It offers 23 walk-in sites for tents on a first-come, first-served basis. Park entry fee is $3 per vehicle. Camping fee is $5.

There is also a private campground outside the park's boundary on the east side with a store, swimming pool, showers, picnic tables, fire pits and unlimited camping. One vehicle per site is permitted, $6 per person; maximum $18 with up to six people and one vehicle. Group sites are available at $5 per person, $50 minimum. Reservations taken only for groups of 10 or more. Information: 1-389-4462.

The park has two entrances which do not meet with a through road. Many hiking trails do.

To enter the west side from Monterey, take Highway 68 to U.S. 101, then proceed south on U.S. 101 to Soledad. From Soledad, travel east on State Highway 146, which will dead end at the west entrance.

To enter the east side from Monterey, take Highway 1 to Route 156 into Hollister. In Hollister, take State Highway 25 south. The Pinnacles turnoff is 34 miles south of Hollister on 25.

A visitor's center, located at both east and west entrances, is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

17-MILE DRIVE

The justly famous 17-Mile Drive should be on every visitor's itinerary of the Monterey Peninsula. Perhaps nowhere do there exist together such a carefully protected natural forest and such an unspoiled and incomparably beautiful stretch of coastline.

Entry is through one of the gates to the privately maintained Del Monte Forest – Lighthouse Gate, Country Club Gate, Hill Gate or Carmel Gate – all clearly marked. Gate fee is $5.75 per car.

If entrance is through the Carmel or Hill Gate and a right hand turn begins the drive, first stops along the way should be three high points in the forest offering commanding views of some of the world's most breathtaking scenery.

Shepherd's Knoll gives a bird's eye view of Monterey Bay, in clear weather all the way across the water to the northerly Santa Cruz Mountains. Huckleberry Hill, one of the highest points in the Forest, is followed by Carberry Knoll which offers a sweeping panorama of the Carmel Bay, Point Lobos and the Santa Lucia Mountains.

Spanish Bay is next, winding through the charming homes of Monterey Peninsula Country Club where Juan Portola's first Spanish expedition camped before discovering Monterey Bay on a second venture.

Point Joe is further up where the drive follows the coast for most of the rest of its winding way. The scene of several shipwrecks, with mariners mistaking it on stormy nights for the entrance to Monterey Bay. Just beyond is "the restless sea," a curious perpetual turbulence caused by the configuration of the ocean floor.

Bird Rock Hunter Course, used for equestrian events, and the famous Spyglass Hill Golf Course lie to either side of Bird Rock and Seal Rock. These barren offshore outcroppings are home to hundreds upon hundreds of gulls, cormorants, seals and sea lions. There are mounted field glasses for observing this marine life.

Fanshell Beach is covered with bright seashells and water-smoothed stones at certain times of the year.

Cypress Point, next on the Drive, gives its name to a private club and golf course. The Point itself, reached by a well-marked side road, allows a spectacular vista of the magnificent coast 20 miles south of Point Sur and the lighthouse on a clear day.

Lone Cypress, one of California's best known landmarks is standing sentinel on a foreboding rocky point. A footpath leads to the point for a wide view. Another famous tree, the gaunt, bare white Ghost Tree seems out of another world. Beyond it lies the northernmost tip of Carmel Bay, Pescadero Point.

Stillwater Cove, is past The Lodge, Pebble Beach, Pebble Beach Golf Links, Pebble Beach Stables and Collins Polo Field and back to the Carmel Gate.

NEARBY MISSIONS

Often overlooked by sightseers are three of the old Spanish missions in south Monterey County, one of them just over the county line. Each alone is a pleasant day's trip, or all three may be included in a weekend loop drive.

Mission Soledad, only partially restored, is about 25 miles south of Salinas and three miles west of Soledad on Fort Romie Road. It was the 13th mission to be built. After Mexico secularized the church in 1834, Soledad Mission fell into disrepair. Restoration, started in 1954, has so far seen the completion of the chapel and the padre's wing. Hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. daily except Tuesday. Admission is by donation. 1-678-2586.

San Antonio Mission is reached by the Jolon turnoff just north of King City on U.S. 101, and is 25 miles from the highway. Turn right at Jolon. Hillside buildings used for military headquarters may be mistaken for the mission, which is located nearby. The present church dates from 1810, when it was moved from its original site for a better water supply. This mission, on a 70-acre parcel with a background of the Santa Lucia Mountains, was once a thriving agricultural community tended by many Indians. Restoration began in 1903, and in 1949 the Hearst Foundation and the Franciscan Fathers of California made an all-out effort to rebuild it in its entirety. There are camping facilities and picnic areas near by. The mission itself is open to visitors daily from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. and Sundays 11 a.m.-5 p.m. A free will offering is requested. 1-385-4478.

Mission San Miguel, stay on the Jolon road and drive 26 miles near Bradley. On reaching the town of San Miguel, exit at 19th St. for the mission. Founded in 1797, and not completed until 1818, the 16th mission has a plain-looking exterior but inside is richly decorated with murals painted by Indians of the parish. Beehive ovens and grape and olive presses are still on the gardened grounds. San Miguel is open 9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. daily except major holidays. The charge is 50 cents per person or $1 per family. (805) 467-3256.

HIGHWAY 1: BIG SUR

The 94-mile drive from Monterey to the fabulous San Simeon along Coast Highway 1 is an unforgettable experience. Highway 1 winds south along the Carmel and Big Sur coast, offering spectacular views of the rugged Pacific Ocean shoreline and vistas in and of the Coast Range, the 100,000-acre Ventana Wilderness Area stretching off to the east, and cattle ranches near Big Sur. The road crosses the graceful Bixby Creek Bridge, the largest and highest single span concrete archway bridge in the world, and winds its way into Big Sur, where you pass stands of coast redwoods.

To make camping reservations in California state parks, call 1-800-446-7275. For details on backpacking or the Ventana Wilderness, call the U.S. Forest Service, Big Sur Guard Station, at 667-2423.

A word of caution: Scenic Highway 1 is a narrow, winding, two-lane road with many sharp curves; it's a good idea to make sure your brakes are in good condition and tire inflation on your car is correct. Drive carefully and courteously and you'll have a day well worth a little extra caution. For road condition information, call 667-2173.

Andrew Molera State Park: Located just before Big Sur, it offers access to the mouth of the Big Sur River and the scenic meadows between the ocean and the highway. This is a day-use, walk-in park, open from sunrise to sunset except for a designated walk-in trail camp where overnight camping is permitted. Park in the parking lot; there are no roads into the park.

Pfieffer Beach: Located a short distance up the hill (south) from Pfeiffer Beach Big Sur Park is the turnoff on the right where there is public access down a two-mile drive through the Sycamore Canyon and a short trail through a tunnel of cypress trees that leads to the beach, which is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

Los Padres National Forest and Sand Dollar Beach: (accessible only from the south) located beyond the Big Sur area where the wilderness of the Los Padres National Forest stretches to your left and the mighty Pacific to the right.

SAN JUAN BAUTISTA and FREMONT PARK

The town of San Juan Bautista is a state historic park. The 75-mile round trip is a pleasant one-day excursion from the Monterey Peninsula. San Juan Bautista is reached via Highway 1 north to Highway 156 at Castroville. At the U.S. 101 junction, head north about five miles to the San Juan Bautista cutoff.

Mission San Juan Bautista: Founded in 1797. The church is the largest mission in California and has been in use since 1912. Historical artifacts and exhibits are on display. Further restoration is in progress. A 50 cent donation is requested. Hours are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

Central Plaza: Facing the mission, the historic plaza of the town is flanked by the old Zanetta Hotel, built in 1858 (containing a fine exhibit of old carriages and wagons with a blacksmith shop in the rear), and several old adobe houses. Buildings are open 9 a.m.-5 p.m. daily. There is a 50 cent fee.

There are many interesting specialty shops, art galleries and restaurants to explore, many of which are located in buildings more than 100 years old.

Fremont Peak State Park: Located 11 miles from San Juan Bautista. Walking shoes or hiking boots are necessary for the hike from the parking area to the summit at 3,171 feet above sea level. It was here that Colonel Fremont raised the first American flag over California on March 14, 1846. The view of Monterey Bay is spectacular. The park is open all day, year round and has picnic and camping facilities. Admission: day use, $2 per car, 50c per dog; camping, $3 per night per car, $1 per dog. Senior citizens with ID receive discounts. 1-623-4255.
